Court, Granting Killer's Wish, Authorizes Death by Firing Squad

of 4-to-1 Decision Is Still a Possibility Prisoner Makes Plea to 'Die Like a Man'

CITY, Nov. 10—The Utah court, by a vote of 4 to 1, today granted a stay of execution to a convicted murderer, and authorized a firing squad next Monday. The stay of execution heretofore granted is withdrawn and vacated and any appeal on behalf of Gary Gilmore is dismissed forthwith.

Gilmore leaving court in Lake City yesterday.

Today's decision, which reversed a 3-to-2 decision by the high court on Monday that granted a stay of execution, said, "The stay of execution heretofore granted is withdrawn and vacated and any appeal on behalf of Gary Gilmore is dismissed forthwith."

The dissenting opinion by Justice D. Frank Wilkins, contending that there were still unresolved problems, said, "I believe they can be resolved by this court with deliberate speed, but not deliberately within the time period of the few days that have passed."

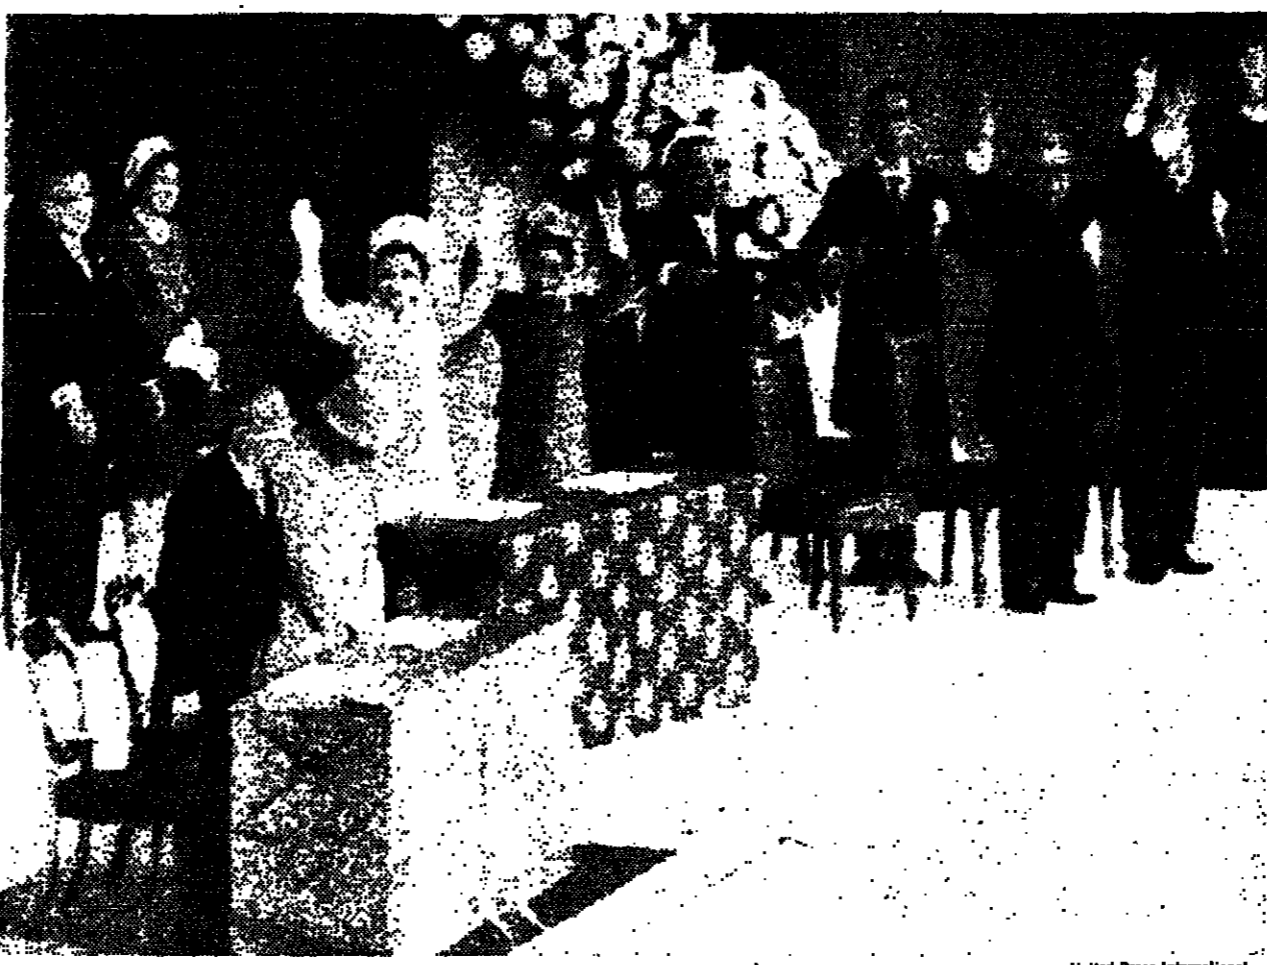

The 35-year-old prisoner was convicted last month in the slaying in July of a young motel manager in Provo. The defendant dismissed his court-appointed attorney last week when he rejected the attorney's plan to appeal his case, and asked the Utah Supreme Court to allow his execution to be carried out by firing squad at dawn on Monday, the day set by his trial judge.

Mr. Gilmore appeared today in handcuffs and white prison garb, and said: "I believe I was given a fair trial, and I think the sentence was proper, and I'm willing to accept it like a man and wish it to be carried out without delay."

If the sentence is carried out as scheduled, it will be the first execution since the United States Supreme Court handed down a decision last July 2 saying that capital punishment was not inherently unconstitutional.

The decision upheld the laws of Texas.

Celebrations and Protests Greet Hirohito on His 50th Anniversary

TOKYO, Nov. 10—Some Japanese celebrated the 50th anniversary of Emperor Hirohito's reign today. Others did not, and some even protested.

The feelings behind those attitudes mark some deep changes in the affluent Land of the Rising Sun half a century after a young man was allowed to grow his first mustache, was permitted to marry and then ascended the throne of his father on Dec. 25, 1926.

It has been the longest reign of any Japanese emperor in recorded history. During Hirohito's reign, Japan became the pre-eminent military power in Asia, launched World War II in the Pacific, became the only nation to experience atomic bombing, suffered its first military defeat and occupation and rose from the ashes of fire-bombings to build the second most powerful economy in the non-Communist world.

"Today," the Emperor said today in a rare public reflective moment before his 111 million countrymen, "as I look back over the past 50 years, I recall many joys and sorrows. Above all things, I am deeply impressed that the people, after having overcome national crises and ordeals, have become what we are today. "However, when I think of the many victims and their families of the last war and as I still see the scars of that conflict, my heart is filled with great sorrow. "Then, in an unusual warning, he said: "I believe that we should not be blinded by the prosperity of the moment. The world changes second by second and our country will have to deal with many problems in the future." He did not elaborate.

He spoke, standing, before 7,500 Gov.

40,000 REPORTED HELD IN HARSH LAOS CAMPS

Witnesses Talk of Food Shortages, Forced Labor and Many Deaths

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10—Thousands of former rightist and neutralist Laotians are confined in harsh and repressive internment camps scattered throughout Laos, according to accounts being received here.

The reports, provided mainly in interviews from escaped or released prisoners and from letters from within the camps sent to relatives in Laos, said that the camps differed widely in their levels of severity. Some of them on islands near the capital, Vientiane, are apparently short-term "re-education" facilities to provide such former "undesirables" as prostitutes and wayward teen-agers with Communist indoctrination. These camps have been visited by foreign diplomats and journalists.

At least 35,000 people have been killed so far in a war that involves a struggle for political power, religious animosities and the presence in the country of nearly a half-million Palestinians, including thousands of armed guerrillas. The Syrians, apparently according to plan, did not move into the center of the city to try to separate the armed militia forces. While the Syrians have not disclosed their plan of operations, they are expected to move into the center of Beirut in the next few days to separate the armed bands. ## SYRIAN ARMY UNITS MOVE INTO BEIRUT TO ENFORCE TRUCE

NO RESISTANCE ENCOUNTERED

Action, Under an Arab Agreement, Is Part of Military Occupation Aimed at Ending Civil War

By JAMES F. CLARITY

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Nov. 10—Columns of Syrian tanks and combat troops entered Beirut today without firing a shot, in effect beginning the final phase of Syria's military occupation of Lebanon in an effort to end the 19-month civil war.

The Syrian operation marked the first time the Lebanese capital had been under foreign military control since 1958, when United States marines landed in a move intended to prevent a coup.

The Syrians deployed their forces at a key crossroads in east Beirut near the line in the city separating the warring Lebanese factions. The advance also placed Syrian tanks, troops and artillery on the northeast edge of the city and near the airport south of the capital.

The Syrian advance, which involved at least 60 Soviet-made tanks, dozens of mobile artillery pieces and 5,000 soldiers, was made under agreements approved by the major Arab countries.

Arab leaders approved, in meetings last month in Saudi Arabia and Egypt, the creation of an enlarged multinational Arab peacekeeping force of 30,000 men.

Only Syrians Enter Beirut

But in today's operation, the peacekeeping force, which is overwhelmingly dominated by the 23,000 Syrian troops already in the country, consisted only of Syrians. Syria has upward of 23,000 soldiers in Lebanon, and some reports have put the figure as high as 30,000.

No new troops supposedly being sent by other Arab nations were involved today and none are expected here soon. The largely inactive Arab peacekeeping force of 2,300 that has been here since June took no part in today's operations.

In effect, Syria began today to complete the military occupation of Lebanon it began in June, when it intervened in the civil war with troops and tanks to help Lebanese right-wing Christians against the leftist Moslems and Palestinians it had previously supported.

Philadelphia Hotel Closing, a Casualty Of 'Legion Disease'

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10—The Bellevue Stratford, this city's principal convention hotel and a cultural landmark in whose ballroom thousands of Main Line debutantes waited into Philadelphia society, became today another casualty of last summer's unsolved mystery epidemic of "legionnaires' disease."

Officials of the company that owns the hotel announced this morning that the 72-year-old Bellevue Stratford will close next week. The decision follows a three-month fiscal decline brought about by public reaction to the hotel's apparent role in the outbreak of the disease. The illness, which sickened 180 persons and proved fatal to 29 of them, struck primarily among members of the Pennsylvania American Legion after the group held a convention at the Bellevue Stratford last July. The rate of occupancy for the hotel's 750 rooms reportedly fell from 80 percent to as low as 3 percent after the widely publicized outbreak.

The reaction to the closing here, where convention business comprises about half the city's $200 million-a-year income from visitors, was one of shock. Mayor Frank L. Rizzo called the closing "a sad and terrible thing." It was regarded as all the more distressing in view of the prospective competition for Philadelphia

E.P.A. Backs Clean-Air 'Trade-Off' Allowing New Industrial Pollution

ANAHEIM, Calif., Nov. 10—The Environmental Protection Agency announced today a controversial new air-pollution enforcement policy that would permit new pollution-causing industry even in areas where Federal air quality standards have not yet been met.

Under the policy, described as a "compromise" between no growth and excessive air pollution, new industrial emissions would be permitted in places such as the New York City-northern New Jersey area if equivalent reductions had been achieved in the same area, so that there would be no net increase in the area's pollution. The policy was announced by the agency's deputy administrator, John R. Quarles Jr., in a talk before a pollution engineering conference here. It was immediately challenged by the National Clean Air Coalition, a Washington environmental group, as "a legally questionable undercutting and distortion" of the Clean Air Act of 1970. The coalition, which includes the League of Women Voters, the American Lung Association, the Sierra Club and Friends of the Earth, said it would lodge its objections in a meeting with E.P.A. officials tomorrow.

The Clean Air Act called for nationwide compliance with Federal air quality standards by mid-1975. Most of the country's 247 air quality control regions are still in violation of these standards in respect to one or more basic pollutants. The assumption has been that until they met the standards, major new industrial facilities would have to be virtually non-

Power Bloc in Arab World

Once Again, Egypt, Syria and Saudi Arabia Link Policies and Ambitions to Pursue Mideast Aims

By HENRY TANNER

CAIRO, Nov. 10—After months of political estrangement, Egypt, Syria and Saudi Arabia have once again aligned their policies and agreed upon a joint Arab strategy aiming at negotiating an overall settlement—in stages—of the conflict with Israel.

This in short, Arab diplomats say, is the meaning of the realignment that has taken place in the Arab world in recent weeks.

The realignment started when the Saudi royal family imposed a cease-fire on the Syrians and Palestinians in Lebanon last month and summoned Syrian, Egyptian and Palestinian leaders to Riyadh for the first of two meetings of Arab leaders.

Alliance Split on Kissinger

The Saudi-Syrian-Egyptian alignment dictated Arab strategy once before—during the months preceding and following the war in October 1973. It fell apart when Egypt and Syria reacted in sharply different ways to the shuttle diplomacy of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

The revival of the alignment has important implications for the Middle East peace situation. It means that sooner or later negotiations for an overall settlement may well get under way, either in the Geneva peace conference that convened in 1973 or in some other forum. The Western-oriented conservatives among the Arab governments appear to have won out. The "progressive" leadership of President Hafez al-Assad of Syria

U.N. Proposes Building Expansion To Provide Room for 170 Nations

By KATHLEEN TELTSCH

Special to The New York Times

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Nov. 10—The United Nations administration has proposed to the 143 member governments the first major expansion of the organization's building facilities in a dozen years to enable it to accommodate up to 170 countries.

The building program, which would require a $47 million outlay over three years, would add a large conference room, expand the seating arrangements in the General Assembly Hall and several other meeting rooms, and provide additional dining facilities and a bigger lounge for the diplomats. The plan also would make available more room for storage and printing.

The six-acre area of lawns, shade trees and gardens at the northern end of the United Nations enclave would be preserved, according to the preliminary plans for the renovations. The plans were provided by Harrison & Abramowitz, the architectural firm that designed the United Nations complex along the East River. The plans call for construction of a two-level underground building as an extension to the existing premises beneath the grassed area and the replacement of the lawns virtually intact.

The new building proposal was presented to delegations in a report from Secretary General Kurt Waldheim that said the United Nations headquarters, which was built 25 years ago, had become strained by the influx of new countries and by the recent practice of granting observer status—and with it seating space in meeting rooms.

The present facilities were opened in 1951 when the membership was not expected to go beyond 90 for a long time. There have been minor renovations in seating space over the years but the report that was prepared in consultation with top United Nations political advisers suggested that it would now be wise to plan for a potential membership of 170 members and 15 observers.

The proposal may run into opposition from delegations reluctant to approve the expenditures when it is discussed by the Assembly's budget committee. The funds would come out of the United Nations budget, for which the United States pays a 25-percent share and the Soviet Union 12.9 percent. Japan, West Germany, France, China and Britain also pay large shares in descending order.

The building renovations would be carried out in stages, beginning in January 1978, so as to create minimum interference with scheduled meetings.

The renovation in the Assembly Hall would cost $13,473,697 to $14,134,811, depending on whether the members select a plan that would have three delegations sitting elbow-to-elbow at each bank of tables with the one in the middle deprived of an aisle seat, or a proposal that would seat two delegations to a table and give each access to the aisle—a distinct advantage if a delegation likes to move around and lobby freely.

The expansion program calls for a new conference room to be built as a southward extension of the conference building. That extension would also provide additional space for the staff cafeteria. The two-level structure also would be topped by a garden.

The main North Lounge, a spacious room with bar and coffee shop where the diplomats congregate between meetings, is to be enlarged by a 40-foot extension. Also planned are a balcony with enlarged coffee shop, a reading room and larger dining area and smaller rooms for private luncheons and receptions.

South Africa Dismisses Vote in U.N.

By JOHN F. BURNS

Special to The New York Times

PRETORIA, South Africa, Nov. 10—South Africa reacted contemptuously tonight to the anti-apartheid resolutions approved yesterday by the General Assembly of the United Nations, vowing that it would never yield to international pressure even if it was forced into complete diplomatic isolation.

A statement issued by the Foreign Minister, Hilgard Muller, said that a group of resolutions passed by the Assembly "pay absolutely no regard to reality, but abound in willful distortions, wild exaggeration and the Assembly's well-known double standards."

The statement added: "What the world should realize, however, is that even if South Africa should have to stand alone, we have the capacity and determination to fight for our rights, and that we shall never yield to this kind of pressure."

The resolutions, approved after an extended debate on apartheid, were the most comprehensive assault the world body has ever mounted on South Africa's racial policies.

The 10 resolutions were approved by wide margins, although many Western and South American countries abstained.

The resolutions supported efforts by South Africa's black majority to seize power "by all possible means." They also called for a complete economic boycott, a mandatory arms embargo and the ouster of South Africa from all international sports. In addition, they condemned "collaboration" between Israel and South Africa.

Mr. Muller described them in his statement as a shocking example of the length to which the third world and the Communists and their allies were prepared to go to achieve their own political and ideological ends.

An Encouraging Sign

The Foreign Minister went on: "They ignore altogether the well-being and the true aspirations of the people of South Africa, which they so hypocritically pretend to promote. And, in complete contradiction of the principles of the U.N. Charter, they advocate and encourage armed violence and aggression in and against South Africa."

"These resolutions, as well as recent events in southern Africa, leave one with the overwhelming impression that South Africa's enemies have only one real goal—and that is for their own ends, to do everything in their power to prevent peaceful evolution in South Africa, and by violence and bloodshed, to bring to power a government of their own choosing."

Mr. Muller, noting what he described as the "extraneous nature" of the resolutions, said that more countries than usual abstained from voting. He indicated that the Government here took this as an encouraging sign of the unwillingness of many United Nations members to lend support to militant measures against South Africa.

British Make a New Bid To Break the Deadlock At Rhodesia Conference

Special to The New York Times

GENEVA, Nov. 10—Britain made a new effort today at the conference on the future of Rhodesia here to break the deadlock on the date for legal independence under black majority rule.

Black leaders said the move resulted in no progress, but the white delegation disagreed.

After a series of separate morning meetings with Ivor Richard, the British chairman, the four black leaders said they remained adamant that the independence must come within 12 months of the end of the conference.

However, Pieter van der Byl, Foreign Minister in the white-controlled Government of Prime Minister Ian D. Smith, said after seeing Mr. Richard in the afternoon that the conference was "looking a bit better."

Mr. van der Byl would not elaborate, but his remark was attributed to the chairman's having apparently suggested a way to outline the processes for transferring power to the black majority without actually setting a date.

Mr. Richard, who returned to Geneva last night after a 24-hour visit to London for consultations, said at the end of the day that in his meetings with the delegations some of the ground explored was "new" while some was "well worn."

The "well worn" was the reshaping of positions on the date issue, which, a British spokesman later said, was "almost entirely" the subject of the chairman's private discussions with the delegation leaders.

The Rhodesian governmental delegation maintains that 22 months will be required to complete the constitutional and other processes for the transfer of power under a biracial interim government. Neither blacks nor whites are ready to accept formally the 15 months suggested by Brit-

Charges Against Mao's Widow Now Extend to Movies

By FOX BUTTERFIELD
Special to The New York Times

HONG KONG, Nov. 10—Chiang Ching, Mao Tse-tung's widow, and her three political colleagues now reported under arrest, helped make a movie this year that symbolically attacked Chou En-lai, the late Prime Minister, and the new party chairman, Hua Kuo-feng, according to the Chinese press and radio.

The movie, called "Atomic Bomb," was scheduled to be released on Oct. 1, shortly before the arrest of the four, whom Western analysts have characterized as leftists or radicals.

Miss Chiang, who supervised literature and the arts after the Cultural Revolution of the 1960's, has come under attack as having suppressed movies and operas she did not like and persecuted directors and script writers.

According to articles in Jenmin Jih Pao, the party daily, Miss Chiang harassed one film crew and local officials who cooperated with this crew despite a directive by Mao himself approving their work.

Blacklist Material Gathered

She was reported to have sent spies to gather "blacklist material" on the people responsible for the movie she opposed.

At the same time, Miss Chiang, herself a minor movie actress in Shanghai in the 1930's, was charged with having ordered that hundreds of "yellow films" from Hollywood and Hong Kong be brought secretly to Peking for her own private viewing.

Although many charges against Miss Chiang and her associates involve questions of policy, they are often framed in personal terms. The question is how far the new leaders intend to go in reversing cultural policy. A recent article in Jenmin Jih Pao said "We must fight to usher in the bright springtime in which a hundred flowers of Socialist literature and art bloom together." The phrase evoked the 1956-57 period when Mao briefly allowed a less regimented policy of letting "a hundred flowers bloom."

Among the accusations against Miss Chiang is the charge that last February, after Chou En-lai died, she ordered the making of movies that would attack "capitalist-roaders." Among the movies was one that ostensibly showed the overthrow of the officials of a provincial party committee. According to a Canton radio broadcast, the movie was "in fact an attack on our respected and beloved Prime Minister Chou."

Miss Chiang Denounced Human Film

Miss Chiang and her associates are also accused of having "viciously killed" a film titled "The Gardener's Song," produced in Hunan, where Mr. Hua was still nominally the first secretary. A Hunan broadcast said the leftists had also "madly cursed" another movie, "Two Blueprints," which was made under Mr. Hua's "affectionate care."

Another controversy involved a movie titled "The Pioneers," about the Taching oilfield in Manchuria. The movie was made on Chou's instructions. Miss Chiang was angered that it had been made without her consent, and she refused to let it be shown to deputies of the National People's Congress, the nominal legislature, which met early in 1975.

When she finally decided to view the film, she "flew into a rage and declared with ferocity: 'This film has serious errors. Whom are you glorifying?'"

Miss Chiang is said to have implied that the movie was designed to praise Chou, and she ordered all those involved in the production to engage in self-criticism. Eventually, one of the script writers sent a letter to Mao, who viewed the film himself in July 1975 and issued a directive saying: "There is no big error in this film. Suggest that it be approved for distribution. Don't nit-pick."

But Miss Chiang persisted and ordered the moviemakers brought to her. When she saw the man who had written the letter to Mao, she is said to have insisted that he write Mao another letter admitting that the movie was bad and then remake it.

Debate on Nazi Ace Delayed Minister of Defense Is Stricken

By CRAIG R. WHITNEY
Special to The New York Times

10—Georg Leber, the West German Minister, was hospitalized with abdominal infection this afternoon, delaying a Parliamentary debate on his control of two air force generals, a rightist extremist who is a veteran pilot in World War. Leber is highly respected in Western Europe and the political discussion of his illness has been a blow to the German Government. It has shown that the proper role of the armed forces in West Germany may not have been forgotten. The diplomat said of the case, "I haven't, either." He said he was unable to resolve for himself the relationship of the military tradition of the German people to the military today.

Accepts Postponement Democratic opposition requested the debate on the dismissal of the general, the opposition termed the Christian Democrats' postponement after he because of the background: the commander of the Luftwaffe wing near Bonn had permission for a gathering to be attended by members of the present government and some of the present government's men of the Luftforce of the old wing was Ulrich Rudel, the most famous officer of the war, and a member of a Defense Ministry "unregenerate" neo-Nazi group. The word didn't get down to the reunion took place on Oct. 22 to 24. Later, Gen. Genki, the Luftwaffe's chief and his deputy, Maj. Gen. Genke, held an off-the-record to explain their attitude, allow every man the possibility of changing his political views," General Franke said. "After all, there are former Communists sitting in the Bundestag—Deputy Wehner, for instance, who was in Moscow for a long time." Both generals have since taken pains to state that they do not share the neo-Nazi views of the wartime ace.

At the press briefing General Franke was referring to Herbert Wehner, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's majority whip in the lower house of Parliament, who was a Communist until World War II. Mr. Wehner has been one of the guiding figures of the Social Democratic Party since 1948.

U.S. Air Force Invitation Reported
Mr. Leber, a more conservative Social Democrat, said he could not believe his ears when he heard what General Franke had said. Generals, the Defense Minister said, had no right to talk that way about the institutions of a democratic state. After an investigation, he dismissed the generals on Nov. 1.

After that, Mr. Leber said he discovered that Mr. Rudel had visited the United States last month—at the invitation of the United States Air Force, Mr. Rudel says. The United States Embassy in Bonn said it could neither confirm nor deny his story, and Mr. Leber expressed his annoyance to Ambassador Walter J. Stoessel Jr. last week.

"This affair," Mr. Leber said, "apparently touched a scar over a wound that we as a people should be careful not to open again. It would not be a bad thing if the case were regarded as closed and overcome."

Under Fire From 2 Sides
However, it became a political controversy. Both the Defense Ministry and many West German newspapers say they have received a flood of mail both for and against the Leber decision, some of it signed "Sieg Heil."

Many members of the left wing of Mr. Leber's party do not trust the West German officer corps. They think the Defense Ministry has been too lenient in the past about permitting reunions and contacts between veterans' organizations and younger officers.

Now he is drawing fire from conservative quarters as well. According to reports that persisted today, despite official denials, Mr. Leber, in discouragement, has even offered to resign.

West Germans Plan To Pay Unemployed Who Get Distant Job

Special to The New York Times

BONN, Nov. 10—The West German Government approved a limited $180 million plan today to pay the unemployed to move and find new jobs. There are 944,000 persons without jobs, or 4.1 percent of the labor force.

Though the recovery from the recession of 1975 has slowed, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's Government seems unlikely to take additional action to stimulate the economy before Jimmy Carter takes office in Washington. His economic plans are being watched by both government and industry leaders in West Germany.

The measures approved today are aimed at helping the chronically unemployed in areas like the Ruhr, where finding a job in depressed industries like coal mining or steel is difficult.

Under the new regulations, which will apply to the end of 1977, any unemployed worker who moves or commutes long distances to a new job will get payments to offset the cost. At present, an unemployed worker does not have to accept a job from the employment office if it means moving or having to spend hours commuting.

According to the Labor Ministry, an electrician with a wife and two children who has been unemployed at least six months and finds a job 60 miles away from where he lives would be entitled to a premium of $330. The employment office would also pay his moving costs and give him about $3,200 to buy the curtains and other things he needs to get established in a new home. There is also compensation for those who accept jobs at less pay than they made before.

The Labor Minister, Walter Arendt, said the program could help more than 200,000 find new jobs outside of where they live.

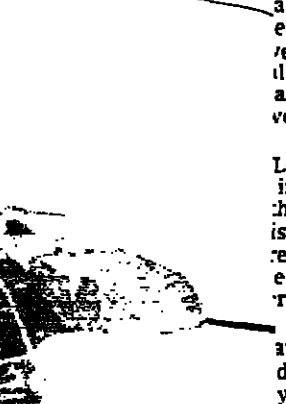

Chancellor Schmidt campaigned for reelection this fall on a promise to restore full employment, but a spokesman, Armin Grunewald, said today that the Cabinet would not consider further measures until January.

Mr. Schmidt has said that a new tax cut or general economic stimulus here could endanger West Germany's control over inflation, which in the last year has raised consumer prices by only about 4 percent.

Rebel Angolans Said to Be in Flight

OSHAKATI, South-West Africa, Nov. 10 (Reuters)—South African officials said today that Angolan guerrillas who had been locked in fierce fighting with Angolan Government and Cuban forces for five days were trying to retreat into the bush to escape superior firepower.

Refugees fleeing into South-West Africa from the battle zones have said, according to the officials, that the Angolan Government wants to crush dissident forces in southern Angola by tomorrow, the first anniversary of independence from Portugal.

The guerrillas of the dissident nationalist movement, the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, were believed to be trying to withdraw eastward to the thick bush near the Zambian border. From there the guerrillas, who are led by Jonas Savimbi, are expected to try to continue their hit-and-run war against the Government.

Refugees who said the Government was trying to close the border, said that its forces were using scorched-earth tactics, destroying crops and livestock in a wide area of the south. Some 3,000 refugees have crossed into South-West Africa in the last few days, but the officials said the flow had virtually stopped. The total for the year is 8,000, most of them old women and children.

White South Africans fear that if the rebel forces are routed, Angola will reward the South-West African guerrillas for their help by assisting them in their guerrilla war against South African control.

Ethiopian Official Is Slain

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia, Nov. 10 (AP)—A high-ranking civilian official was shot to death last night by what the military Government calls "anarchists," according to a Government announcement today. Guetenet Zewde, permanent secretary in the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs, was killed as he was leaving his office in Addis Ababa, the announcement said.

Air Aide Who Complained Is Out

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 A civilian intelligence officer of the Air Force who publicly criticized the views of Gen. George S. Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, resigned today after being stripped of his special security clearances because he talked to a New York Times reporter.

Joseph Churba, the Air Force's senior intelligence officer for the Middle East, said in a telephone conversation that his superior, Maj. Gen. George Keegan, told him on Monday that because of his newspaper interview his special clearances for signal and satellite intelligence had been suspended and that he was no longer of any value to the Air Force as an intelligence estimator.

As a result, he said, he resigned.

The Air Force confirmed the facts, but a spokesman said that Mr. Churba knew when he took the job in December 1972 that as an intelligence officer he could be unable to speak publicly.

On Oct. 19, Mr. Churba, in an interview with The Times criticized General Brown's views that Israel was a military burden on the United States. Mr. Churba said these views were "dangerously irresponsible" because they encouraged the Arabs and Russians to believe American support for Israel had decreased.

Mr. Churba also had trouble getting an article published in which he argued that Israel was of strategic importance to the United States. Yesterday, as he was resigning, he was informed that his article had been cleared.

U.S. AIDES SAID TO ASK FOR PRESSURE ON IRAN

But Kissinger Reported to Resist Threatening an Arms Cutoff Over the Price of Oil

By LESLIE H. GELB
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10—High Ford Administration officials are urging the United States to tell the Iranians that an increase in the price of oil would lead to reconsideration of the multi-billion-dollar American program of arms sales to their country, according to well-placed officials.

The officials said that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger rejected the strategy of threatening to link a price rise to arms sales once before and was likely to do so again, though other officials felt that he might reconsider in view of the continuing worldwide economic deterioration. He is said to believe that threats will not work, serving only to jeopardize the overriding American interest in good relations with Iran.

High officials in the State and Treasury Departments and the Pentagon want the Administration to convey privately to Iran a message of this sort: If you increase the price of oil, it will sour attitudes toward Iran in the United States, and even if we wanted to continue selling you arms, it would be virtually impossible to do so.

Meeting Due Next Month

The oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are to meet in mid-December in Qatar. Iran is regarded as the leader of a group seeking a 10 to 20 percent increase in prices, now about $11.50 a barrel from the Persian Gulf.

While Iran is regarded as a powerful force in OPEC, there are 12 other members, including Saudi Arabia, the largest single producers, so Iran will not be able to dictate a decision.

Mr. Kissinger and other senior Administration officials have been saying that any increase would have catastrophic effects on such nations as Britain and Italy as well as on the developing countries. Nonetheless, he has consistently resisted efforts to use what all agree could be the most effective and most risky bargaining lever—the arms sales to Iran.

United States sales to Iran have been averaging $2 billion a year for the last five years; when Mr. Kissinger visited Teheran in August he talked of $10 billion more in highly sophisticated military systems in the coming years.

Just before Mr. Kissinger was to depart for his meeting with Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, the issue of linking oil prices and arms sales was seriously broached in the Administration for the first time, officials said. Mr. Kissinger agreed to raise the issue, but only in relation to the Shah's intention of buying plants to reprocess spent fuel from nuclear reactors.

Cutoff Required by Congress

At that time Congress had just passed legislation requiring a cutoff of virtually all forms of aid to any country that purchased reprocessing plants or other facilities that could lead to the production of weapons-grade plutonium for nuclear explosions.

To dissuade the Shah from buying the reprocessing plants and locating them on Iranian territory, the officials related, Mr. Kissinger assured him concerning Iran's importance to the United States as a regional power and pledged that it would have continuing access to the most advanced conventional arms. Several weeks later the Administration announced that it had agreed to sell Iran 160 F-16 jet fighter aircraft, regarded as the front-line American fighter of the future, with a price tag of $3.4 billion. Iran is already taking delivery of the F-14 fighter-bomber, the most advanced craft in the Air Force inventory.

According to the sources, Mr. Kissinger rejected the idea of threatening to halt arms because he believed that the United States should continue to supply them even if Iran raised oil prices. "He did not want the Shah to call his bluff," an official explained, "and then have to sell the arms anyway."

Mr. Kissinger, who has maintained that Iran is an important stabilizing and anti-Soviet influence in the volatile Persian Gulf area, decided to use economic grounds in making his case to the Shah against a price increase. The officials said that he argued that an increase would wreak havoc on the international economic system and would be as harmful to Iran in the long run as to the countries that would suffer initially.

Senators on Israeli Visit Suggest Carter Appoint Kissinger Special Envoy

Special to The New York Times

JERUSALEM, Nov. 10—Six United States senators today recommended that Jimmy Carter appoint Henry A. Kissinger as a special envoy to initiate new peace negotiations between the Arabs and the Israelis.

The recommendation was made at a news conference by Senator Abraham A. Ribicoff, Democrat of Connecticut, who is heading a delegation of 13 senators on a tour of the Middle East. He said that 1977 might be a year of diplomatic movement and that the United States was the logical nation to play a leadership role.

"I don't know anybody in the world who can do a better job on this than Secretary Kissinger," Mr. Ribicoff said. Five other senators present—four Democrats and a Republican—endorsed the idea with varying degrees of enthusiasm.

Howard H. Baker Jr., Republican of Tennessee, said, "I think Senator Ribicoff has a hell of a good idea," while John Glenn, Democrat of Ohio, said that if Mr. Carter were interested in someone "with obvious skill such as Secretary Kissinger, then certainly he should be used." Other favorable comments came from Howard W. Cannon of Nevada, Wendell H. Ford of Kentucky and Dale Bumpers of Arkansas.

The delegation, which leaves tomorrow for Jordan, Egypt and Iran, has been conducting a review of Middle East policy and has been assessing what restrictions should be placed on a proposed sale of nuclear reactors to Israel, Iran and Egypt to assure that they not be used for military purposes.

Egypt, Syria and Saudi Arabia Form a Power Bloc in the Arab World

fine are broken. With Syrian troops making up nearly all the Arab peacekeeping force in Lebanon, the chances of the "rejectionists" recouping their strength there are nil and they may be forced to move their operations to Iraq, Libya or Algeria—far from the Israeli borders.

Saudi, Syrian and Egyptian officials have quietly started to lay the groundwork for an Arab diplomatic offensive, according to informed Arab diplomats.

All three members of the new power alignment—Egypt, Syria and Saudi Arabia—are on record as favoring resumption of the Geneva peace conference. They are reported to be studying ways of getting around the Israeli-American veto against the presence of a Palestinian delegation at the conference table.

The idea of a single Arab delegation in which the Palestinians would be included keeps coming up in private conversation.

U.S. Election Affects Plans

The schedule for the Arab initiative has been changed by the outcome of the American election. If President Ford had won, the Arabs would have moved quickly. Now the feeling is that Jimmy Carter must be given time to define his Middle East policy. No real move is expected until late spring at best, Arab diplomats now say.

In the meantime, there will be talks between the leading Arab countries and the Palestinians on a new definition of the so-called Cairo agreements, under which Palestinian armed units in Lebanon are to be confined to the southern part of the country.

Informed diplomats here and in Damascus believe that Saudi Arabia, Syria and Egypt are intent on avoiding a military confrontation with Israel at this time and thus will not send the Palestinians into the border region, where the Israelis have set up a buffer zone by arming and directing right-wing Christian militia forces.

But Palestinian units have gone back into the Arkub, near the point where the Lebanese, Syrian and Israeli borders meet. They have also sent reinforcements to the key Moslem district town of B'nt Jbail, which the right-wing Christians had hoped to take over.

Under the triple influence of Saudi Arabia, Syria and Egypt, the Arab kings and presidents asked the P.L.O. to give up much of its military power and to assume a political role instead.

President Sadat, for one, is known to feel that the Palestinians must be given political compensation for what they lost militarily.

Saudi Arabia, Syria and Egypt each has its separate role in the revived dominant alignment. The Saudis clearly are the senior partners in the enterprise. Without Saudi money and other oil money that the Saudis can raise, Syria and Egypt can do nothing.

The Saudi royal family, in addition, is the Arab conscience. These days, a joint Arab strategy, regardless of its author, needs the stamp and seal of Saudi moral endorsement.

Syria obtained a mandate to continue its policy in Lebanon. President Assad's power has been enhanced by the fact that one part of his army occupies eastern Lebanon while another part, wearing the colors of the Arab League, is acting as a peacekeeping force in the remaining Christian and Moslem areas of the country.

Mr. Assad thus will be able to negotiate on a much broader front than if the Golan Heights had remained the only issue between him and Israel.

Contrary to Syrian hopes of a year ago President Assad has not become the Arab world's dominant figure and its chosen spokesman.

Egypt, it is felt, will figure prominently in the coming negotiations. The Western-oriented strategy initiated by President Sadat has become the accepted model for the three-power alignment, even though it will not be so exclusively focused on the United States. Egyptian diplomatic ability and contacts will be essential.

President Sadat has thus managed to end the isolation in which he found himself since the second Sinai disengagement agreement with Israel 14 months ago, which enraged the Syrians and Palestinians.

King Hussein of Jordan is regarded as one of the losers in the Arab realignment. Saudi Arabia did not invite him to Riyadh despite numerous Syrian efforts to get him there. Mr. Arafat won that point from the Saudis. At the Cairo meeting, King Hussein remained virtually silent and was visibly not part of the mainstream.

With the Syrians and Palestinians drawing closer together once more, Mr. Assad must handle his Jordanian connection more cautiously.

If the Arabs want to compensate Mr. Arafat for his loss of military power in Lebanon, the cheapest way to do so may be to keep Jordan out of future diplomatic moves and to reaffirm the role of the P.L.O. as the sole representative of Palestinians.

The re-emergence of the Saudi-Egyptian-Syrian alignment with a Western-oriented conservative outlook and a wish to enter into negotiations, is seen as giving new opportunities to American diplomacy in the Middle East.

For the Soviet Union it means more problems.

In Lebanon, the Russians were caught between Syria and the P.L.O., both of which they had supported. Syria pushed ahead with its policy there despite Soviet warnings.

The Syrian-Egyptian accommodation, which is progressing more rapidly than anybody thought possible a few months ago, has led to a resumption of military coordination between Cairo and Damascus.

Soviet influence thus is further narrowed. But this may be offset to some extent by a greater willingness on the part of Egypt to cooperate with the Russians on the international scene. A beginning in this direction was made last week when the Soviet Foreign Minister, Andrei A. Gromyko, and the Egyptian Foreign Minister, Ismail Fahmy, met in Bulgaria, in their first meeting in more than a year.

Economic Ministers Are Shifted in Egypt; Political Aides Stay

Special to The New York Times

CAIRO, Nov. 10—A new Cabinet involving major changes in Egypt's economic leadership but none in political figures was sworn in today by President Anwar el-Sadat.

Dr. Abdel Moneim el-Kaissouny, chairman of the Arab International Bank, was named a Deputy Prime Minister for financial and economic affairs. The post, which places Dr. Kaissouny above four Cabinet ministers dealing with economic matters, did not exist in the previous Cabinet.

Dr. Kaissouny, who held the same Cabinet economic position in the 1960's under President Gamal Abdel Nasser, is known and respected in Western economic circles as an advocate of fiscal restraint.

Western sources said that Dr. Kaissouny, as an informal adviser to President Sadat, was one of the founders of the "open-door policy" announced by the President in 1973 to encourage foreign investment in Egypt.

Another major change in the Cabinet is the removal of Osman Ahmed Osman, the powerful Minister of Housing and Reconstruction and the contracting enterprise. He has been a key figure in the of the Suez Canal zone, redevelopment of Cairo and development of new industrial surroundings. He has been nearly every major construction project in Egypt in the last two years.

Last spring, Mr. Osman was accused of embezzling $20 million in transactions as a member of the cabinet. He denied the accusation. Sadat voiced support for the people's Assembly, as Egypt known.

The new Minister of Economic Reconstruction is Hamed Hassan.

Other key Cabinet ministers include Prime Minister Mohammed el-Masry, Minister of Finance Ismail Fahmy in their posts.

Under Dr. Kaissouny's new ministers, replacing Zaki Shafiq, who was Minister of Economic Cooperation and Development, is Ahmed Abu Ismail, Minister of Economic Development. Named to replace Dr. Hamed el-Sayeh, an official Bank of Egypt. The new minister is Dr. Mohammed Salim, an economist who had been the Arab Economic Development Minister in Abu Dhabi.

Ford Aide Says President Weighs Variety of Options for His Future

By PHILIP SHARCOFF
Special to The New York Times

PALM SPRINGS, Calif., Nov. 10—President Ford, still recuperating from his losing campaign, is slowly coming to grips with a fundamental question: What does a reasonably young and vigorous ex-President do with the rest of his life?

Mr. Ford is not yet wrestling very hard with the question. He is taking things easy at this plush desert resort, playing golf and generally following the advice he offered reporters when he arrived here on Sunday. "Relax," he told them. "Have a good time. No pressure."

But very soon he must face such basic decisions as where he will live and what he will do with himself. He still has the duties and perquisites of President to buffer the pangs of withdrawal from power.

A close aide said Mr. Ford was considering "the widest spectrum of options" for his future. These range from setting down at a place like Palm Springs and devoting his time chiefly to golf and other pleasures of retirement, to preparing for another run at the Presidency in 1980.

Both Extremes Ruled Out

Those close to the President say they are sure that he will not settle on either of these extremes. He is too active to do nothing but loaf, they say; moreover, he believes that he can still be of service to the country. But they add that he has no inner need to run for the Presidency again.

Mr. Ford has indicated to those around him that he would like to play some kind of active role in national and Republican Party affairs, and he is also expected to work on his memoirs, although not right away.

The question of where the Fords will live is also unresolved. The family loves the house in Alexandria, Va., that they lived in before they moved into the White House. But one person close to the family said the President believed it might not be wise to remain in the Washington area, where he probably would be asked to second-guess everything the Carter administration does.

One thing Mr. Ford is determined not to do, several aides said, is anything that might make things difficult for President-elect Jimmy Carter. The President intends to do all he can to make the transition as smooth as possible because he believes that would be best for the country, the aides said.

By all accounts, Mr. Ford found defeat very difficult to accept at first. He felt he had done a good job as President. He thought he would win. In more than a quarter of a century of public life, he had never lost an election. And he badly wanted a full term in office following his caretaker Administration.

Absence of Introspection

But, according to those close to him, Mr. Ford was never given to brooding, introspection or self-doubt. The obvious absence of these traits, in fact, was a part of his political appeal, particularly as it underscored how different a personality he was from the man he succeeded.

Intimates of the President said he began to shake off the agony of defeat at a family dinner at the White House last Thursday. As the family sat around the table, they began to swap campaign stories, each member telling of mistakes and bloopers they had made on the campaign trail. Susan Ford, for example, recounted how she had been so preoccupied with an impending visit to the dentist on Nov. 4 to have wisdom teeth removed that she exhorted a crowd at one stop, "Don't forget to vote on Nov. 4."

Mr. Ford's spirits began to lift and soon he was rallying his family, telling them not to dwell on defeat and to begin thinking of the future as a new adventure.

Utah Court Authorizes Killer's Death by Firing Squad 2 DOZEN ASK TO JOIN UTAH FIRING SQUAD

Georgia and Florida, but struck down those of North Carolina and Louisiana.

Mr. Gilmore arrived at the State Capitol at 8 A.M. after a 20-mile automobile ride from Point of the Mountain State Prison. In the closely guarded, ornate courtroom, Dennis Boaz, one of Mr. Gilmore's new attorneys, asked his client if he was ready to accept the death penalty. The defendant replied: "Not at this moment. But I am ready to accept it next, Monday morning at 8 A.M."

"Not a Suicide Pact"

"His attorney said: 'It is unique and ironic that the Attorney General and my client take the same position. This is not some kind of suicide pact with the state, but an irrational state of mind.'"

"He added that psychiatrists who examined Mr. Gilmore before the trial had found him sane."

"The prisoner, apparently aware of speculation that the American Civil Liberties Union might file for a stay, had written a letter to the court, saying:

"Any and all efforts made by any group of people, including particularly the ACLU or any other organization, should be considered null and void. These people do not represent me."

"Don't the people of Utah have the courage of their convictions? You sentenced a man to die—and when I accept the extreme punishment with all grace and dignity, the people of Utah want to back down and argue with me about it. You are silly."

"The reaction to today's ruling by the Utah high court raised the possibility of more court actions that might bring about another stay of execution."

"One point that apparently might be raised was that Mr. Boaz, who is reported to be a writer as well as a lawyer, might have a contract to write about the case; if so, he might have created a conflict of interest."

"This possibility was raised by David Kendall of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who is considered to be an expert on capital punishment litigation."

Mr. Kendall, who said he had talked to the defendant's dismissed attorneys, remarked: "There are a lot of questions. One would be the defendant's right to be executed. The state has an inherent interest in not executing someone whose trial is riddled with errors."

Craig Snyder, one of the attorneys dismissed by Mr. Gilmore, said he had not seen the court order, but added, "We are considering several possibilities, including the very real possibility of doing nothing."

One possibility, he said, could be to file an application to Associate Justice Byron R. White, who is the member of the United States Supreme Court responsible for the area that includes Utah, asking for a stay of the Utah Supreme Court's order.

During today's hearing, however, the court accepted Mr. Boaz as counsel for Mr. Gilmore. Justice Albert H. Ellett, who later ruled with the majority against a stay of execution, told Mr. Snyder: "You are no longer in it. You are relieved, supplanted."

Mr. Kendall, in discussing the possibility of another stay, observed that the date set for execution was 15 days before the defendant's time for appeal would run out. Normally, he said, the court would permit a stay until the time for appeal ran out.

Moreover, he said that, despite the fact that the defendant had asked to be executed, there were precedents to raise concerning psychiatric problems.

Mr. Gilmore, who has spent 18 years in jail, was convicted by a jury of nine women and three men in the shooting death of Benny Bushnell, a Brigham Young student who managed the City Center Motel in Provo. The defendant had also been charged, but not tried, for the slaying of a Brigham Young law student working as a gasoline station attendant in nearby Orem.

The slayings infuriated many in Utah, where a number of apparently senseless slayings occurred recently. Rage was also fanned by comparisons of the victims—both young, model citizens—and the accused killer, who has admitted that he has wasted most of his life in jail.

At Oregon State Prison, Mr. Gilmore was said to be a chronic troublemaker. Prison records there showed that, in 1964 and in 1971, he was taken to the state mental hospital for "special treatment" and was confined to the prison's psychiatric security unit after participating in a cellblock rebellion.

The trial lasted three days. After his conviction but before sentence was passed, Mr. Gilmore admitted the killing, saying:

"I feel like there was no way what happened could have been avoided. There was no other chance or choice for Mr. Bushnell. It was something that could not be stopped."

Last Execution Was In Colorado in 1967

CANON CITY, Colo., Nov. 10 (UPI)—On a cabinet near the gas chamber of the Colorado State Penitentiary hangs a small tarnished brass tag engraved with the prison number and name of the last person to be executed in the United States.

It reads:

Luis-Jose Monge

The date on the tag marks the beginning of the longest period the United States has gone without an execution. Before then, Justice Department records show, there was at least one execution every year.

Today, the Utah Supreme Court granted a condemned killer his request to die before a firing squad. The execution of Gary Mark Gilmore, scheduled for next Monday morning, would be the first since Mr. Monge died in the gas chamber at Canon City.

Convicted of bludgeoning his wife and three of his 10 children to death, Mr. Monge eventually asked defense attorneys to give up their fight to reduce his death sentence to life imprisonment.

Warden Says Callers Volunteer for Role in Execution of Killer Who Says He Wants to Die

By JON NORDHEIMER
Special to The New York Times

DRAPER, Utah, Nov. 10—The count-down resumed today for Gary Mark Gilmore's execution by firing squad, scheduled for Monday.

The Utah Supreme Court's decision to grant the convicted killer's wish to die without added months of delay of his case has sent Samuel W. Smith, warden of the state prison here, back to the file that contains the names of volunteers who want to man the guns of the firing squad.

The prison phone has been busy since Mr. Gilmore, a tall 35-year-old convict who has spent most of his life behind bars, pleaded with the court to execute him. The callers, more than two dozen of them, were volunteering to shoot him outside the prison gates five days from now. Their names have been added to a file of volunteers that has been untripped since the last execution was held in Utah 16 years ago.

Now, suddenly, Warden Smith today began a review of the list, conscious of the burden of selecting five volunteers who can assume the burden of dispassionately meeting out an act of capital punishment for the first time in the United States in a decade.

The warden today said that he would draw the names from the list of volunteers after he had screened those who sought participation for "unhealthy" reasons.

"I can't judge everyone's motive," he said, "and I'm not sure what criteria I should use in evaluation. I'm just looking for solid citizens."

Warden Samuel W. Smith

There has not been an execution in the United States in a decade, and none in Utah since 1960. And so the warden is somewhat uncertain about the technical details of such a procedure, should it become necessary.

In the past, executions were administered by the sheriff of the county in which the crime took place. The sheriff was responsible for selecting the five men who would shoulder the 30.06-caliber rifles—one chamber loaded with a blank—and upon command fire a broadside at the doomed man strapped in a plain wooden chair about 20 feet away.

But under the new state statute, rewritten to make Utah's death penalty comply with the guidelines on capital punishment set by the United States Supreme Court in 1972, responsibility for the execution was transferred to the prison warden.

"We would like the executions to go as smooth and problem-free as possible," Mr. Smith, his long 6-foot-7-inch frame folded behind an office desk, reflected today.

"The condemned used to be shot in an open field north of the prison beside a rough drainage ditch across the high desert of the Valley.

They were marched outside perimeter of barbed wire fence guard towers at dawn, placed in front of the canal bank, a command to the riflemen view inside a temporary but that somewhat resembled a

Taxi Unit Is Accused of Failure on Gypsies

The New York City Taxi and Limousine Commission was accused yesterday by City Council Finance Committee members of failing to enforce regulations against illegally cruising gypsy taxicabs. In turn, Herbert Ryan, a commission member, accused the Council of "doing nothing" to improve the situation. This led Councilman Michael DeMarco, Democrat of the Bronx, to interject heatedly: "I've heard this same speech for the last four years. You have legislation introduced and then do nothing to get it passed. Give me your legislation. I'll see that it gets discharged from committee. I'm tired of hearing excuses from your agency year after year." Following the sometime bitter exchanges—including a suggestion that perhaps the commission should be abolished—the committee approved an increase in license fees for medallion taxi and limousine drivers. The fee was raised from $20 for two years to $40 for three years. Moses L. Kove, the commission chairman, said the city was pushing for state legislation to give his agency jurisdiction over the 25,000 gypsy cabs in the city. If this were passed, he said, the gypsy cabs would be licensed by his department and, like medallion cabs, would have to undergo safety inspections. He estimated that such inspections would drive 10,000 "bad gypsy cars" from the city's streets. Deputy Commissioner Richard Huttner said the commission was "not doing anything wrong" in its approach to the cruising by gypsies, but he noted that the agency had only 15 inspectors and said they were afraid of being "trapped on the head" or "hit by a car" when they tried to enforce a regulation. He said that at a Gracie Mansion meeting two weeks the commission had been promised 50 police officers to help on enforcement but "we never got them." Councilman Edward L. Sadowsky, Democrat of Queens, asserted that the gypsy cabs blatantly ignored the no-cruising regulation and no matter what steps the commission took the gypsies would "go on cruising forever and ever."

Arkansas Governor Says He Got Fund Offers From South Koreans

By RICHARD D. LYONS

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 8—Gov. David Pryor said today that he had twice refused to accept campaign contributions offered him by South Koreans, and that he had seen as many as 300 members of Congress attending parties held in Washington in the late 1960's and early 1970's that were given by Park Tong Sun.

Reference Made to Milk Lobby
Mr. Pryor said that he had told Mr. Park: "You and the milk people are going to get in trouble because you're too noticeable." The latter reference was to dairy industry lobbyists who sought to influence legislation dealing with milk price supports.

Still Regarded as Friend
The Governor said he still regarded Mr. Park as a friend, though he had not seen him for several years.

He depicted Mr. Park as shrewd yet naive about American ways, as well as gregarious but at the same time "very lonesome." Mr. Pryor said that he had seen no improper activity by Mr. Park, but that he had noticed a change in his behavior starting about 1970, and that he had become more serious, even devious.

Mr. Pryor, who is 42 years old, said that he met Mr. Park in 1963 when he was a freshman Representative and he and his wife, Barbara, were members of a young social set that had frequented fashionable Georgetown parties.

Called Vague on Money Source
The Governor said that friends of Mr. Park had frequently asked him about his source of money, and that he had given vague replies about how his family had owned gold mines in North Korea that had been confiscated, and that a brother owned a chain of gasoline stations in South Korea.

Hanna Talks to Grand Jury
Former Representative Richard T. Hanna of California has appeared before a Federal grand jury and testified of his secret partnership with Tongsun Park, his lawyer confirmed today.

Proposals Start Debate
The "Call to Action" proposals have stirred debate among the bishops. Many, including the president of the bishops' conference, Archbishop Joseph L. Bernardin of Cincinnati, feel that the Detroit conference went too far, and that the bishops will have the final responsibility for recasting the resolutions.

Others, led by John Cardinal Dearden of Detroit, who is chairman of the Bicentennial committee that sponsored the two-year project, and Archbishop Jean Jadot, who is the Pope's representative in the United States, have urged a more supportive attitude to the hopes for greater church-wide partnership in formulating church policy.

Minneapolis, Nov. 10—Gov. Wendell R. Anderson announced today that he would succeed Walter F. Mondale in the United States Senate when Mr. Mondale resigned to become Vice President.

Mr. Anderson is expected to leave the Senate in December to give Mr. Anderson an edge in seniority over newly elected members who will be sworn in in January.

Mr. Anderson will resign from the governorship and be succeeded by Lieut. Gov. Rudy Perpich, who will appoint Mr. Anderson to the rest of Mr. Mondale's term.

In making his announcement, at a news conference in the State Capitol in St. Paul, Mr. Anderson said that the procedure might irk some Minnesota voters, and that he might face a backlash when he ran for a full Senate term in 1978.

Catholic Bishops Stirred to Debate By the Proposals of 'Call to Action'

By KENNETH A. BRIGGS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10—Between sips of breakfast coffee today, a Midwest Bishop here for the semiannual meeting of the nation's Roman Catholic hierarchy lamented for people whom he described as "unable to understand that the church is not a democracy."

He was referring specifically to some of the people who took part in last month's "Call to Action" conference in Detroit, the most far-reaching experiment in democratic process that the Catholic church in this country has ever experienced.

Drawing upon the testimony of 1,340 delegates, hand picked by bishops from 150 dioceses, the Detroit assembly adopted a number of controversial resolutions on such subjects as women's ordination and divorced Catholics and scores of others on justice, family values and human rights.

The package of resolutions has been passed along to the bishops for final disposition. Though the bishops' conference is not acting on suggestions at this meeting, having placed the matter on next spring's agenda, the startling impact of the Detroit meeting has been a major item of conversation here.

Strong supporters of the conference attribute the negative responses to inordinate fears among some bishops that they will lose control and to the unexpected drama of the conference itself. Few foresaw such a strong resolution as that asking for the ordination of women, for instance.

The supporters also say that the process provided a model for future national consultation and note with irony that some of the conference's detractors, while insisting that majority rule cannot make doctrine or discipline, have rejected some of the proposals on the basis that most "ordinary Catholics" would not favor them.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 10—Gov. Wendell R. Anderson announced today that he would succeed Walter F. Mondale in the United States Senate when Mr. Mondale resigned to become Vice President.

Mr. Anderson is expected to leave the Senate in December to give Mr. Anderson an edge in seniority over newly elected members who will be sworn in in January.

Mr. Anderson will resign from the governorship and be succeeded by Lieut. Gov. Rudy Perpich, who will appoint Mr. Anderson to the rest of Mr. Mondale's term.

Lawyers Seek Broader Curbs On DNA Study

By BOYCE RENSBERGER

Federal safety regulations that limit Government-funded research in a new area of genetic experimentation involving recombinant DNA should be extended to govern similar research by all laboratories, including those of private industry. This contention is made by the country's two largest environmental law firms in a petition to the Government to be filed today.

The research involves a new method of genetic manipulation that enables biologists to transfer genes from one given species into bacteria, often conferring unpredictable new powers on the bacteria. While the experiments may ultimately yield medically and industrially useful microbes, critics say they could accidentally create new disease organisms.

The two law firms, the Environmental Defense Fund and the Natural Resources Defense Council, contend in their petition to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare that voluntary compliance is inadequate, and assert that private industry is not covered at all.

A number of pharmaceutical and chemical concerns are already conducting such research or are planning to do so in the hope of creating bacteria that synthesize marketable compounds. In Schenectady, for example, General Electric is working to create a bacterial species capable of eating up oil spills.

The 20-page petition also calls upon the department to convene formal hearings on adequacy of the guidelines. Critics have argued that they are not tight enough or that many forms of recombinant DNA research should be banned altogether.

The law groups contend that the department has the legal power to impose regulations on nonfederally funded laboratories through the Public Health Services Act, which empowers the departmental Secretary to enforce whatever regulations "in his judgment may be necessary" to prevent the introduction or spread of communicable diseases from foreign countries into the United States or from one state to another.

Although the National Institutes of Health's guidelines, specifying the design of laboratories and experimental procedures, are based on the idea that an infectious organism might be produced accidentally, most biologists knowledgeable about recombinant DNA say that it is extremely unlikely that any new disease-causing bacteria would be capable of surviving outside the laboratory.

The reason is that the strain of bacteria used in the research is modified so that it is not capable of growing except under laboratory conditions.

Firefighting Called Most Perilous Job

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP)—Firefighting continues to be the nation's most dangerous occupation, with 108 firemen killed in the line of duty last year, the International Association of Fire Fighters reported today.

The association said in its annual survey that firefighters had an on-the-job death rate of 90 per 100,000 in 1975, six times the average rate of 15 deaths per 100,000 in United States industry and twice the 45 per 100,000 rate suffered by policemen.

The total number of firemen's deaths last year was up from 100 in 1974 but below the record of 115 set in 1970.

THIS SUIT AT FINE STORES NATIONWIDE $260 AT THE NEW YORK MANUFACTURER $149
Less than one year ago, Saint Laurie, a fine men's clothing manufacturer for 63 years, introduced a unique selling concept in New York. What started as a gratifying response, has built into an ever growing legion of extraordinarily dressed, true believers. The concept is simple: Saint Laurie sells their exquisitely tailored classic American and European cut suits to the most expensive stores throughout the country. They will continue to sell to stores in New York, but not under the Saint Laurie label, and offer their vast collection (over 25,000 suits) direct to the consumer. Nothing like Saint Laurie exists in New York. To our knowledge, anywhere. The enormous selection, impeccable tailoring, costliest fabrics with the prices at the factory, ranging from $115 to $210, turns the most critical shopper into a delighted customer. If smashing suits are important to your business or personal life and you've been spending $275 to $300 for them at better stores, come to Saint Laurie and see what feeling and looking good is all about.

Gov. Wendell R. Anderson and Lieut. Gov. Rudy Perpich. The 1974 election, the party has controlled all six statewide constitutional offices and held both United States Senate seats and five out of eight seats in the House. Faced with this phalanx of party officials at the top of the state's political ladder, dozens of young aspirants had been searching for an office with which to advance their careers. Mr. Anderson's departure is likely to set off a scramble for the governorship and for other offices that open up before 1978. Mr. Anderson, 43 years old, has held public office since 1958, first as a member of the State House and then as a State senator. In the first year of his governorship, he campaigned successfully for a huge tax increase—well over $600 million. He is a strong critic of Congressional legislation that makes detained prescriptions for state and local recipients of Federal programs. Mr. Anderson's successor, Mr. Perpich, is a 48-year-old native of the Iron Range, in northern Minnesota. He was first elected Lieutenant Governor, with Mr. Anderson, in 1970, after serving eight years as a State senator. He built a political base by criticizing the state's tax treatment of the iron mining companies.

Margiotta May Replace Rosenbaum As G.O.P. Chairman in New York

Vice President Rockefeller and Joseph M. Margiotta, the Republican leader of Nassau County, have discussed the possibility of Mr. Margiotta's replacing Richard M. Rosenbaum as the Republican chairman of New York State, a spokesman for the Vice President said last night.

Mr. Margiotta, who met with Mr. Rockefeller at his midtown town house Monday for lunch, has also discussed the possible move with Mr. Rosenbaum, according to G.O.P. sources.

Mr. Rosenbaum, who headed President Ford's campaign in the state, has indicated that he might be interested in seeking the Republican nomination for governor in 1978 and that he would leave his political post before making such a move.

Reacting to the reports that he might seek the nomination, Mr. Rosenbaum said that "there are no immediate changes in prospect." He added, however, that he did not intend to make a "career" of the state chairmanship. He was reelected to a two-year term last spring.

Mr. Margiotta was considered a likely replacement because he is one of the most successful county leaders in the state and aided Mr. Rosenbaum and Vice President Rockefeller in keeping the G.O.P. delegation to the Republican national convention in President Ford's camp last summer.

However, Mr. Margiotta did suffer a setback in the Presidential election when President Ford fell far short of the 100,000-vote plurality Mr. Margiotta had predicted in Nassau County.

The Nassau chairman has also been the target of several investigations, including the current inquiry into the practice of many Nassau County patronage workers of contributing 1 percent of their annual salary to the Nassau Republican organization.

Mr. Margiotta has been an avowed supporter of Perry B. Duryea, Assembly minority leader and resident of neighboring Suffolk County for the Republican gubernatorial nomination. As a state chairman, he would presumably be neutral if Mr. Rosenbaum and Mr. Duryea clashed.

At NewsCenter 4 we've found opposites attract

Chuck Scarborough, the first word in news—Tom Snyder, the last word. No one could ever accuse them of being two peas in a pod. In fact, they are as different as two newsmen on the same news program could be.

Chuck is a cool, smooth, seasoned writer/reporter who has the unique ability to make the most complicated stories understandable. Watch Chuck and you'll get the reassuring feeling that he's one human being talking to another—you. Watch Chuck during a crisis, a story that's breaking while he's on the air, and you'll get another feeling. That he's one top professional.

Tom, on the other hand, is intense and penetrating, bright and brash. He's not likely to let a reporter off the hook until all the facts are in. Nor is he likely to miss a chance to blunt the harsh edge of the day's events with humor. Watch Tom and you'll see the sparks fly.

Though their perspectives may be different, they do have two things in common. They're both top-notch newsmen. And people really like them.

Since they've joined NewsCenter 4, we've become the fastest growing news show on New York television.

You see, these days New Yorkers want more than a news show that just delivers the news. Or an anchorman who delivers one liners. They want a news show that's going to help them. At NewsCenter 4, that's what we're all about.

E.P.A. Backs Clean-Air 'Trade-Off'

polluting. However, Mr. Quarles told the Fifth International Pollution Engineering Exposition at the Anaheim Convention Center, "We have developed a trade-off policy where the new industrial plant is permitted to build if sufficient additional emissions reductions can be obtained from existing sources so as to produce no net increases."

"In many cases," he said, "the additional emission reduction can be obtained by improvements in a facility already owned by the developer of the new plant. Where such intracompany trade-offs are not possible, the new source would be required to look elsewhere for the needed emission reductions."

Under the Clean Air Act each state has an "implementation plan" that prescribes emission limits for individual industrial establishments. Many of these, under time extensions, are in the midst of explicitly scheduled programs for achieving these limits.

The trade-off policy would mean that in some areas, while existing facilities were still striving to reduce pollution, new pollution sources could be introduced. This contradiction was criticized by the clean-air campaigners as a violation of the intent of the law.

Policy Titled 'Bankrupt'
"It's a bankrupt policy that has to be taken care of," Rafe Pomerance, legislative coordinator of the coalition, said in a telephone interview. "It's a twisted interpretation of the law that will result in many areas not attaining Federal health standards."

However, Mr. Quarles said in an interview that the new policy was not calculated either to negate continuing cleanup programs or to produce, ultimately, pollution in excess of Federal standards.

He said that an industrial plant's emission reductions under a current clean-up program could not be used as a "credit" against new pollution—that offsetting actions for new pollution would have to come from reductions beyond existing Federal requirements.

"In a large number of cases there may be opportunities to squeeze down pollution in plants much tighter than the existing rules would dictate," he said. "We see such reductions as providing the intent of the law."

State Enforcement Held Loose
Most state implementation plans, he continued, covered compliance with Federal air quality criteria plus some margin for growth, but up to now states and cities have been loose in estimating what was allowable under this margin.

"The uncomfortable prospect of saying no to new growth has been a tremendous incentive to officials to simply ignore this problem," he added. "With this new policy, we're trying to establish a framework that will require them to look closely at new pollution sources and have explicit trade-offs in cleaner air to justify them."

The policy relates only to stationary sources of air pollution. In most cities the pollution problem arises mostly from stationary sources and vehicles, with some overlap in their contribution of contaminants such as hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxides.

Acceptable industrial "trade-offs" in such situations, Mr. Quarles said, would require careful inventorying of pollution sources and a case-by-case decision.

DIFFERENCES PERSIST ON CAREER EDUCATION

Its Backers at Texas Meeting Hail Effort to Link Schooling to Jobs, but Doubts Remain on Aspects

By GENE I. MAEROFF
Special to The New York Times

HOUSTON, Nov. 10—More than 6,000 supporters of career education are meeting here this week to take stock of a movement that in less than six years has reached into thousands of school systems and caused a reappraisal of the relationship between the roles of education and work.

"This is probably the most substantial reform movement to occur in the history of education in such a short time," said Dr. Sidney P. Marland Jr., who was hailed in the Astro as the "father of career education."

Dr. Marland, now president of the College Entrance Examination Board, originated and promoted the concept of career education in 1971, when he was the United States Commissioner of Education.

Career education involves giving young people occupational information and experience through their studies and by observation and participation in the job market.

Such an approach has had growing appeal during the 1970's as competition for jobs has intensified and more Americans have demanded that educational preparation be linked to the realities of the marketplace.

Greater Motivation Seen

Proponents of career education contend that the concept has added a practical and tangible element to education that enhances the motivation and achievement of students, some of whom might otherwise not recognize the value of schooling to their lives.

Yet even in the midst of this week's celebration of career education, sponsored by the Federal Office of Education, some of the controversies that afflicted the movement in its early days persisted.

Dispersed among the panelists and participants at the conference were people who say they would like to support career education but continue to have reservations about some aspects of the concept.

They wonder whether career education may be used to exploit youth labor, to lessen the amount of time devoted to the study of the basics and to funnel the children of the economically deprived into the least desirable jobs.

Representatives of organized labor, who say they are perturbed because they have not been adequately consulted during the development of career education programs, are perhaps the most skeptical.

"There has been a bias toward management in career education," said Reese Hammond, education director of the International Union of Operating Engineers.

"This is probably because management sees career education as an opportunity to get a youngster at the age of 14 or 15 and put him in a position that exposes him to the world of work only through management's eyes."

Despite such reservations, the idea of career education has made considerable inroads in the thinking of educators. Implementation is still in the incipient stage, but the concept has become widely known and is influencing educational planning at all levels.

A survey done for the Office of Education last year found that although only 3 percent of the country's 18,000 school districts had completed the steps toward fully instituting programs, more than half were engaged in some staff development for career education and had introduced some aspects of the idea.

Some of the programs in operation have produced results that Federal officials maintain prove the merits of career education.

In a review here of program evaluations, Dr. Sidney High of the Office of Education's career education division, cited examples of students in Lincoln County, W.Va., and Newark, N.J., who made gains in mathematics exceeding those of students not in career education.

Also, according to Dr. High, career education students in Arizona's Pima County and Cochise County showed higher scores in tests of occupational decision-making skills, and those in Pontiac, Mich., who were trained in job-seeking skills had a 4-to-1 success rate over others in getting hired.

$10 Million in U.S. Funds

The career education division is providing $10 million a year for such demonstration programs and at least as much or more is being spent on career education by other Federal agencies.

An argument made in behalf of career education is that it can be a vehicle to spur interest in specific subjects. It is said that students interested in aviation or computer science, for instance, can learn the related mathematics by studying their applications in those career fields.

However, mathematics teachers do not necessarily agree.

"We don't want to ignore the applications that could make mathematics more interesting," said Dr. James D. Gates, executive director of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics. "But we don't want to teach mathematics through applications initially. You should teach mathematics as a spiral kind of subject, building up concepts each year and taking every youngster as far as he or she can go with the concepts, and let the applications follow."

An impromptu debate developed at the session between Dr. George Weber, associate director of the Council for Basic Education, and Charles Heatherley, education director of the National Federation of Independent Business and a member of the Federal Government's National Advisory Council for Career Education.

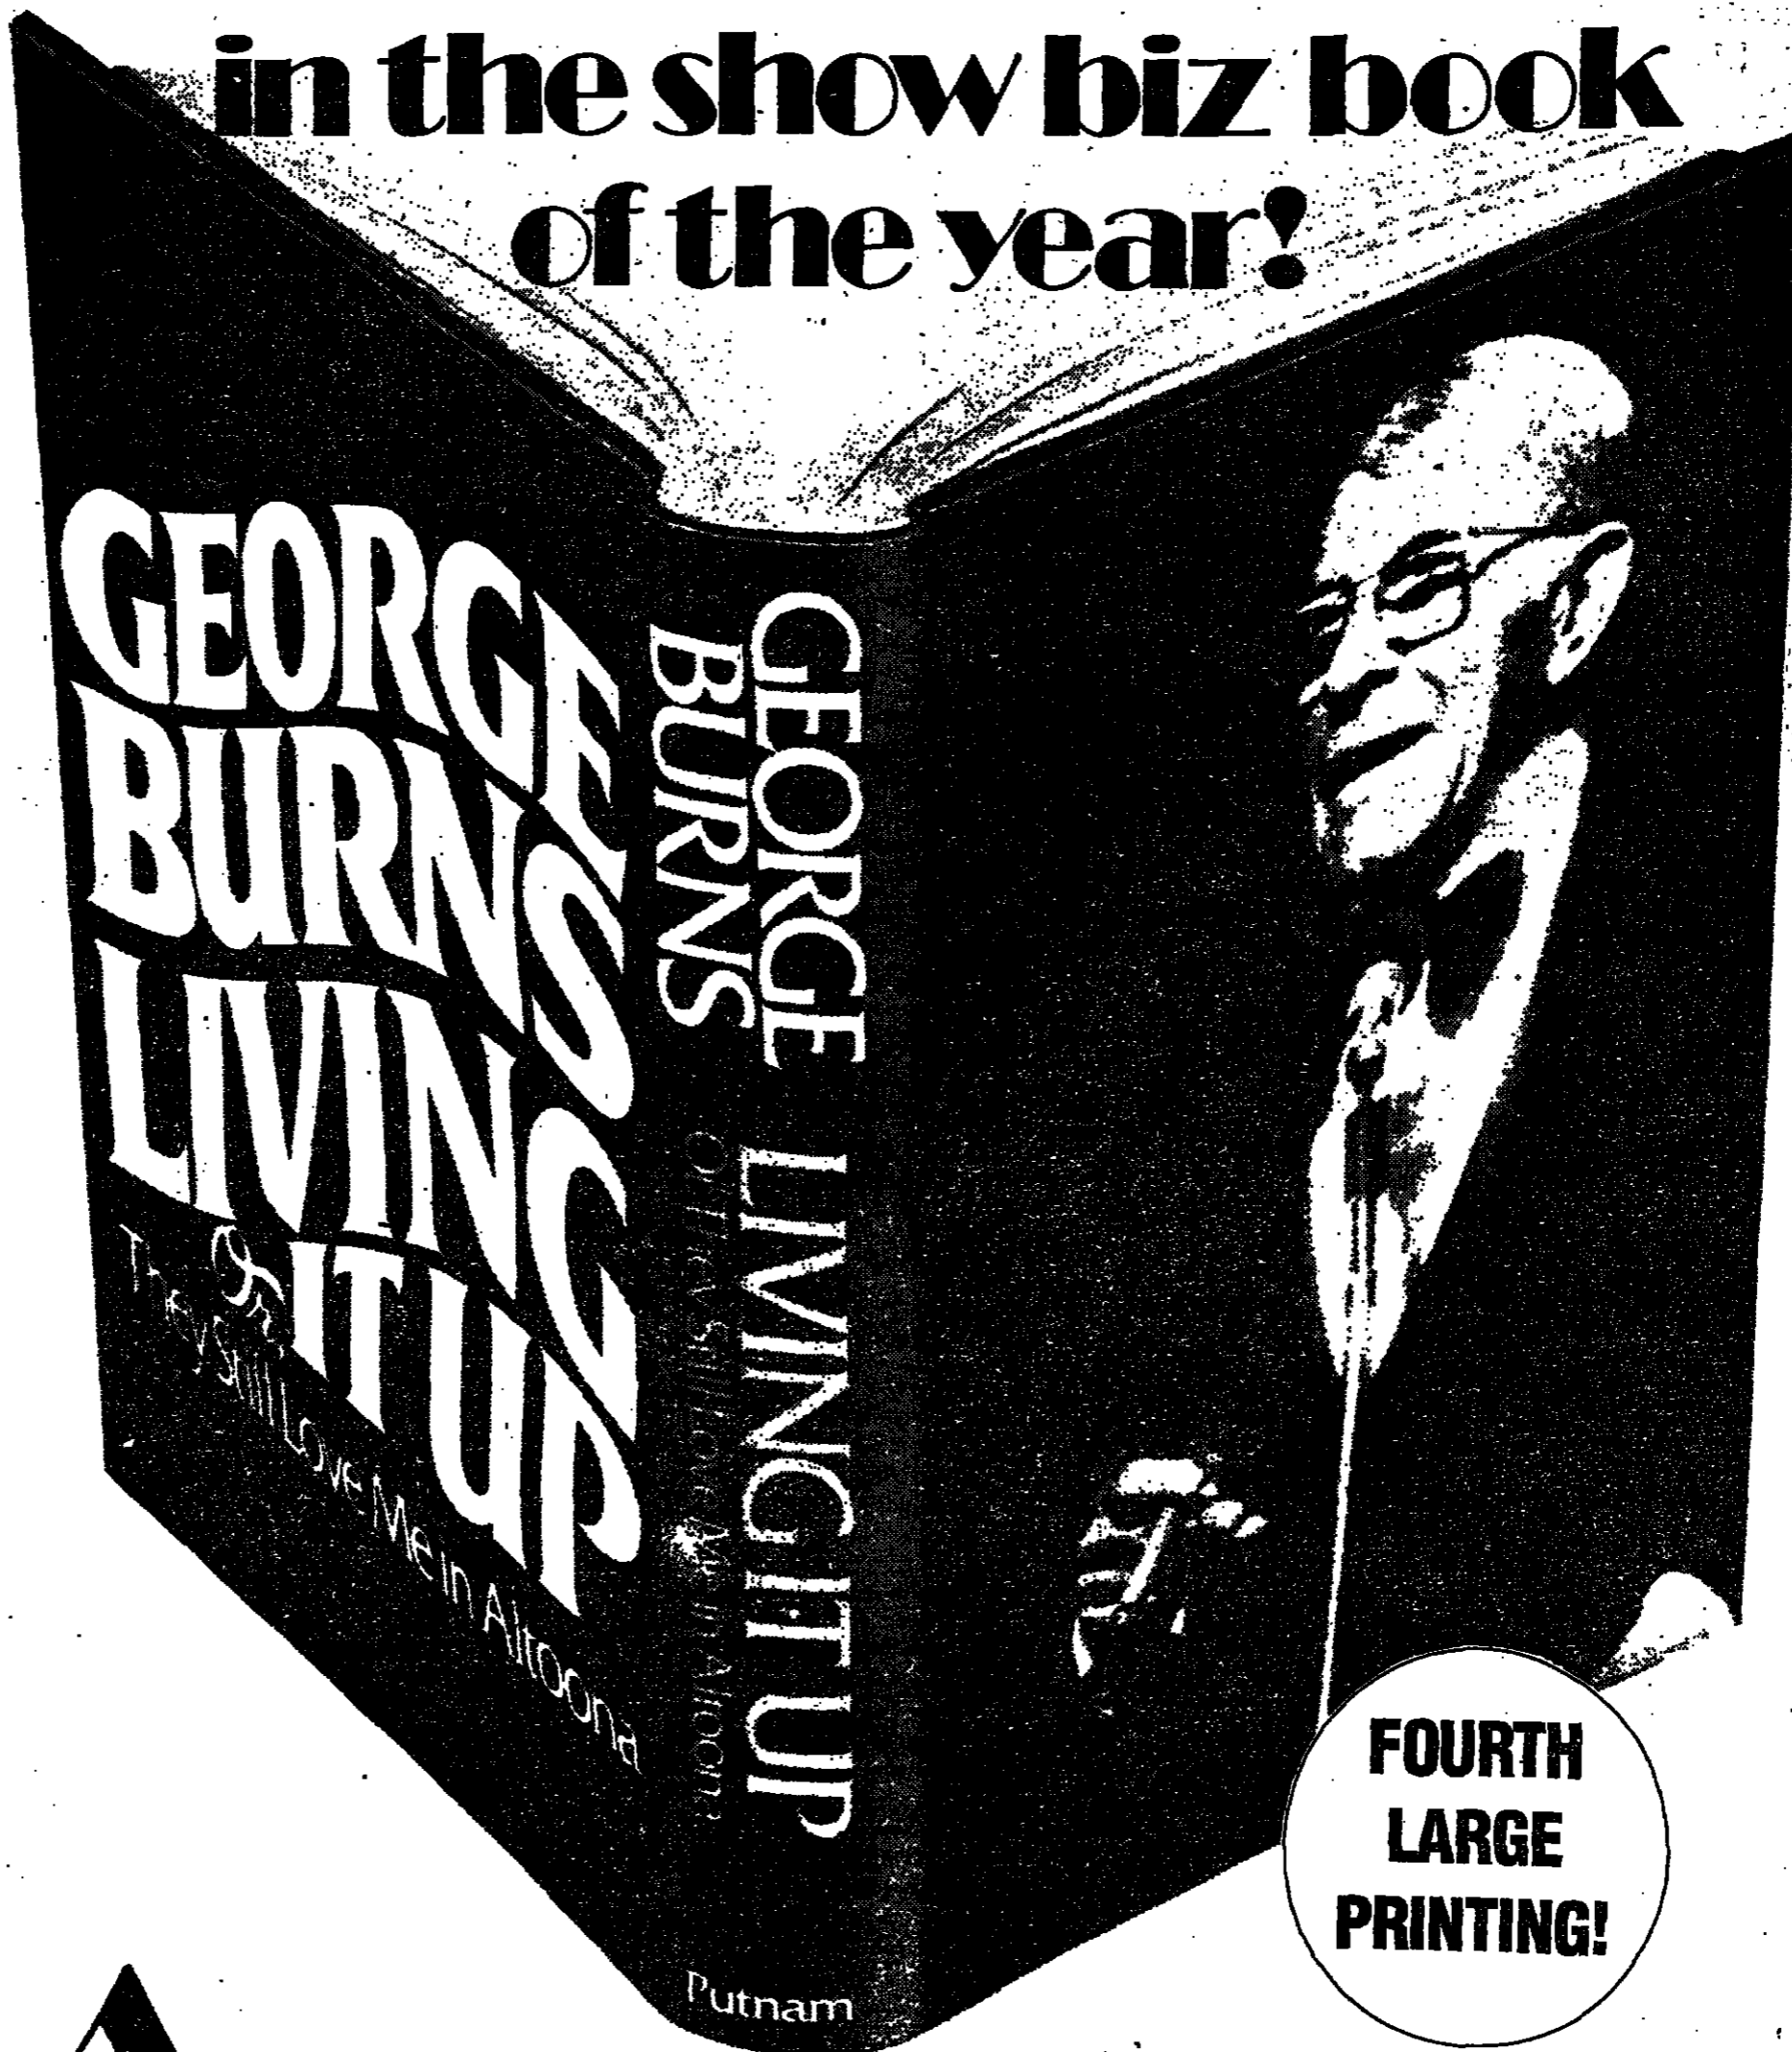

"In many cases, career education is an enemy of basic education," Dr. Weber said, adding: "If career education means that the purpose of schooling is training for work and a global orientation of kindergarten through 12th grade toward economic purposes alone, this would be an anti-intellectual, narrow approach to education and would certainly conflict with basic education."

Mr. Heatherley, who accused Dr. Weber of "confusion between career education and vocational education," said that "critics of career education pick out a few examples or programs or abuses and overgeneralize to indict the entire career education movement."

"Parents and students are insisting on relevance," Mr. Heatherley said in defense of career education. "It's not something that's been cooked up in the backroom of some bureaucracy."

U.F.T. Sues to Keep Its Checkoff

By DAMON STETSON

The United Federation of Teachers has sued in Federal Court in Manhattan for an injunction to forestall the union's loss of the dues checkoff as a penalty for an illegal five-day strike last fall.

The suit contends that the revocation of this privilege of the State Public Employment Relations Board last month was discriminatory and in violation of the equal-protection clause of the United States Constitution.

A similar suit was filed here two weeks ago, also in Federal Court, by the Buffalo Teachers Federation, which is affiliated with the New York State Educators Association.

Taylor Law Challenged

Lawyers involved in the two cases said that the two suits represented the first major challenge to the constitutionality of New York State's Taylor Law, which prohibits strikes by public employees. The law provides for penalties for violations, including the loss of due checkoff.

In the New York City case, involving the 60,000-member U.F.T., the Public Employment Relations Board invoked the law and ordered the checkoff privilege suspended for as long as two years.

The ruling would make it necessary for the union to collect on its own dues of $190 a year from each member. Such collection would be on an individual and voluntary basis rather than through automatic deduction from members' pay by the Board of Education.

The board here, aware that the union had until Saturday to appeal, has not yet stopped checking off dues.

'Invidious Discrimination' Alleged

The U. F. T. suit names as defendants the State Public Employment Relations Board, New York City and its chief officials, and the Board of Education.

The complaint noted that the Public Employment Relations Board was required by the law to impose the revocation of checkoff against unions within its jurisdiction if they struck illegally. But the New York City Board of Collective Bargaining, which has jurisdiction over unions representing employees of mayoral agencies, "has no power or authority to revoke or suspend the dues checkoff provisions," the complaint noted.

Instead, it said, there must be a finding of criminal contempt of a court order, and, even then, the imposition of the penalty—loss of dues checkoff—is discretionary with the court.

The result is an "invidious discrimination" against the teachers, the suit charged.

"The application of this statutory scheme has resulted in the bizarre and discriminatory situation that only the U.F.T., and no other New York City municipal union, has had its dues checkoff privilege suspended or revoked," the suit said.

"Today I am going to be green."

Bonnie Lee Pett Harris, Hempstead, New York

"Today I am going to be green. I always enjoy being green best of all. Yesterday I was yellow and the day before brown. It's really nice being able to be a different color every day. My brother is pink today and when we go to school together I imagine that we shall look somewhat like a rose with its petals, the pink and green together.

"I heard that long ago, maybe a hundred years or something like that, people couldn't change color each day and had to be either brown or white or black or yellow. How dull that must have been! Imagine! It's just so much nicer now the new way, everyday being a different color, and never knowing ahead what color you are going to be.

"My great-grandmother used to tell my mother about how people tried to band together by color. What confusion there would be if people tried that now. Everyday you would have to try to find new bands and the next day they would be broken by the color changes. Now we just all enjoy each other because we do, and that's it, and the colors only help to make the parties pretty. I'm happy it's like this, aren't you?"

Several months ago we began our Tricentennial Program by asking for your thoughts on life in America by the year 2076. We anticipated some very interesting predictions of the future. And that's exactly what we received. More than 50,000 responses came in from every state in the country.

Your ideas were intelligent and imaginative and show a significant insight into the problems and opportunities that face the nation.

One request we made was to imagine that when you got up this morning, you found that it was the year 2076. We asked you to tell us of the many changes you saw and what you felt about this new world of the future.

The responses we received proved to be most imaginative. And we wanted to share one of our favorites.

We plan to make a book available containing some of the most interesting letters we've received. If you would like to obtain a free copy, please write to us.

Please note that all ideas submitted shall become public property without compensation and any restriction on use or disclosure.

Pact Ends Sit-In at Lincoln Hospital

By RONALD SULLIVAN

About 100 sit-in demonstrators ended their protest at Lincoln Hospital in the South Bronx yesterday after they and the New York City Health and Hospitals Corporation negotiated a settlement of their demands for a voice in the appointment of a new executive director.

The demonstrators took over the hospital's second-floor administrative offices 10 days ago after the corporation dismissed J. Cesar Galarce, the hospital's executive director.

Under terms of the settlement, which was negotiated by Dr. John L. S. Holloman Jr., the corporation's president, and Jack Koretsky, the corporation's executive vice president, Henry Karpe, a municipal hospital trouble-shooter for the corporation, formally took over as the hospital's acting executive director.

In turn, Mr. Galarce, who had been involved in a bitter, protracted dispute with the hospital's medical staff, resigned and packed his personal belongings. His ouster represents a defeat for City Councilman Ramon S. Velez, the Bronx Democrat who was widely regarded as Mr. Galarce's political patron.

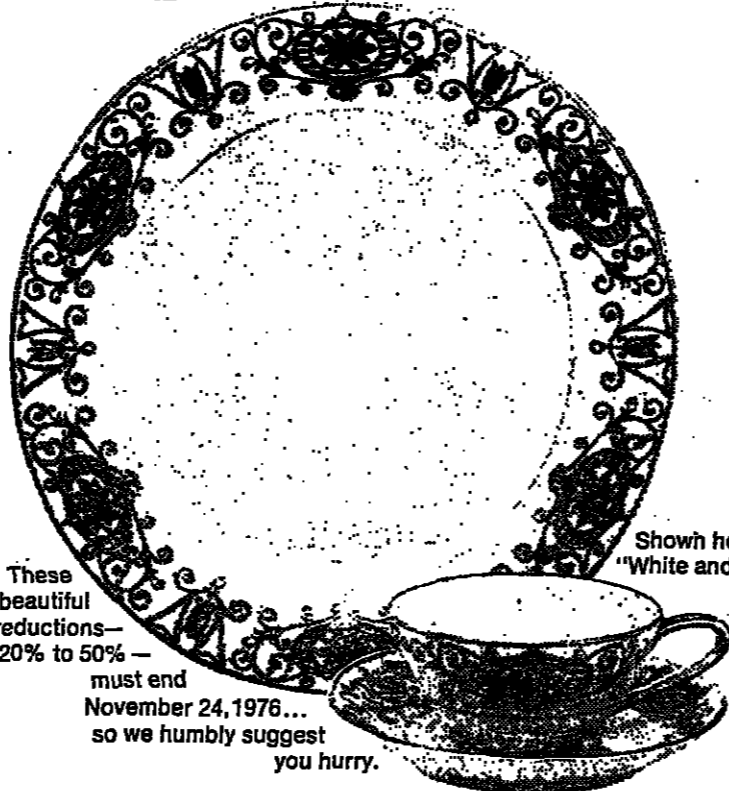

According to the corporation, its settlement with the demonstrators included:

- ¶The appointment of an 11-member search committee to find a permanent replacement for Mr. Galarce.
- ¶The appointment by the corporation of Dr. Jose Nine-Couri, a public-health expert from the University of Puerto Rico, to serve as an adviser at the hospital.
- ¶The appointment of several Hispanic people to high hospital administrative positions.
- ¶The election early next year of a new community advisory board on the ground that the hospital's service extends to new neighborhoods that are not represented by the existing board.

Dr. Gabriel Koz, the president of the hospital's medical board, said he hoped "the settlement reached with the corporation signals an end of the political interference and strife that has plagued the hospital."

Last month, the board approved a resolution calling for Mr. Galarce's ouster and an end to the hospital's being used as a source of patronage by Mr. Velez, who exercised his power through the community advisory board.

Witness Jailed Not Testifying Castellano Trial

By MAX H. SEIGEL

The Government's main witness in the trial of Paul Castellano, the brother-in-law of the slain Mafia boss, decided that he would rather go to jail than testify against Mr. Castellano, who was charged with slaying the boss.

Arthur Berardelli, cited in the indictment as the Government's main witness in the trial in Federal Court in Brooklyn when he was charged with slaying Paul Castellano, the boss, then asked the Court to grant the witness immunity.

Judge John R. Bartels granted the immunity, reading the statute on the subject to the witness.

When Mr. Berardelli persisted in refusing to answer questions, the judge declared him in contempt and ordered him incarcerated immediately until he testifies or until the trial ends.

Mr. Berardelli's refusal to talk was seen as a grave blow to the Government's case against Mr. Castellano, one of the men mentioned as a possible successor to Mr. Gambino as head of the Gambino "crime family."

In his opening statement to the jury on Tuesday, Mr. Lauffer said Mr. Berardelli agreed under pressure in the summer of 1973 to cooperate with the Government in the trial of Mr. Castellano and six other persons. At the time, Mr. Berardelli was facing four charges of stock fraud.

"He will name Big Paul as the ultimate provider of monies," Mr. Lauffer had told the jury. "He will tell you how Paul Castellano, also known as 'Big Paul,' used a buffer between himself and the others. He used his son, Joseph, to insulate himself from the conspiracy."

The prosecutor had also said that Mr. Berardelli had allowed himself to be "wired" so his conversations with Mr. Castellano could be taped.

However, Mr. Berardelli's refusal to testify was said to have raised questions about the Government's ability to use the tapes in prosecuting Mr. Castellano.

Mr. Berardelli's sudden refusal to testify apparently caught the prosecution by surprise. When Judge Bartels asked Mr. Lauffer to call his next witness, the prosecutor said he had no witness ready and asked for an adjournment until today.

The seven men on trial are charged with lending money at interest rates as high as 150 percent a year.

3 Guilty of Slaying a Man Helping Off-Duty Officer Avert a Brooklyn Holdup

Three men were convicted of murder yesterday in the slaying last December of a Good Samaritan seeking to aid an off-duty policeman and thwarting the holdup of a Brooklyn candy store.

The victim, Cecilio Mercado, 32 years old, of 124 Humboldt Street, Brooklyn, had been declared officially a Good Samaritan by Mayor Beame shortly after his death. However, his family has so far received no award under the city program.

A spokesman for the Comptroller's office said that its investigation indicated that the Mercado family deserved an award and that it expected to recommend one to the Board of Estimate at its Dec. 2 meeting.

A jury of seven women and five men deliberated for six hours before turning in a verdict of guilty against the defendants—Ellis Stokely, 27, of 101 North Portland Avenue; Warren Ellis, 22, of 60 Fleet Walk, and Calpin Kadet, 25, of 401 Morgan Avenue, all Brooklyn.

The assistant district attorney who prosecuted the case, Theodore Rosenzweig, said a fourth man was involved in the holdup of Juan Valentin's candy store at 23 Tompkins Avenue last Dec. 17. He is Warren Matlock, 25, of 99 North Portland Avenue. Mr. Matlock, who served as the driver of the getaway car, will be tried separately.

According to Mr. Rosenzweig, an off-duty police officer, Nelson Ortiz, was alerted to the holdup by yells from passers-by as he was shopping in a grocery store next door. He rushed out and started grappling with Mr. Kadet. Mr. Mercado, who worked in the grocery and who was a lifelong friend of the police officer, ran out to help him.

When people called out that there were men inside the store, Officer Ortiz let go of Mr. Kadet to take cover. Mr. Mercado then grabbed the holdup man, but Mr. Kadet pulled a pistol and shot him. Inside the store, Officer Ortiz and other police officers who had arrived seized the others.

Mr. Kadet who had fled, was picked up three months later at the home of a girlfriend at 582 St. Marks Avenue.

The three men found guilty yesterday, after a three week trial, face penalties of 15 years to life in jail. Justice Gerald S. Held of State Supreme Court, who presided at the trial, set Dec. 10 for sentencing.

New York City's Presidential Vote Fell in Relation to Rest of the State

By FRANK LYNN

New York City voters cast only 32.6 percent of the total state vote in last week's Presidential election—a share that was down 4 percentage points from the 1972 election and 10 percentage points from the 1960 Presidential election.

The dropoff, part of a continuing trend in recent years, was particularly significant because the city and its fiscal crisis was a major issue in the campaign and the city was credited with a key role in Jimmy Carter's capture of the state and its 41 electoral votes.

The Democratic Presidential nominee won the city by about 675,000 votes, more than enough to counter President Ford's majorities in the suburbs and upstate, but the city's share of the state vote was still considerably less than its share of the population. Both the suburban and upstate counties produced greater shares of the state vote than their population would indicate.

That was one explanation for both the President Ford's and Mr. Carter's campaigning on Long Island in their last appearances in this state in the final five days of the campaign.

Suburban Figures Rise

The four suburban counties—Nassau, Suffolk, Westchester and Rockland—provided just short of a quarter of the statewide vote, 23.2 percent, although their combined population is a shade over a fifth of the state, 20.5 percent. In 1960, the suburban figures were 17.2 percent of the population and 18 percent of the vote.

The statistics indicate not only that the city population is shrinking in absolute numbers and in relation to growing areas outside the city, particularly the suburbs, but also that the city resident is less likely and the suburbanite more likely to vote.

This trend was particularly evident in black and Puerto Rican districts in the city where the total vote last week was half or less than half the total vote in white districts.

Politically, it means that the parties are more likely to select candidates and emphasize issues acceptable to the suburbs and upstate.

Daniel P. Moynihan, the Democratic Senate candidate, polled more votes in Nassau County than he did in the Bronx, once a Democratic stronghold. Mr. Moynihan also won statewide by nearly 600,000 votes even though he did not have the endorsement of the liberal New Democratic Coalition and the Council of Elected Black Democrats. Suburban and upstate Democrats took up any slack left by those two city groups, sacred cows to whom politicians traditionally pay obeisance.

Other Notable Trends

The shrinking city vote was only one of several shifting trends with great political significance in the Presidential election in the state. Other trends included the following:

Although Kings (Brooklyn) is still the most populous county in the state, it fell behind Queens in total votes—reflecting the greater nonvoting minority percentage of the Brooklyn population.

Nassau and Suffolk are now the third-ranking and fourth-ranking counties in total votes, although they rank fourth and sixth in population. In 1960, Suffolk was the ninth-ranking county in total votes and Nassau the fourth.

The voter turnout in the state is continuing to diminish in all areas, with the city shrinkage rate even greater than in the suburbs and upstate. The percentage of the total population voting last Tuesday ranged from a low of 24 percent in the Bronx and 25 percent in Brooklyn to 45 percent in Albany County, even though the potential voter pool was considerably larger because of an older population and the extension of the vote to persons 18 to 21 years old.

In 1960, the voter turnout as a percentage of population ranged from 38 percent in Brooklyn and Manhattan to 57 percent in Albany County, where many politically active state workers live.

Comparisons Unfavorable to City

The drop in the New York City vote in last Tuesday's election was even greater than its slight drop in population over the last 16 years, not only in absolute numbers but also in relation to other growing areas of the state.

The city has an estimated 41.6 percent of the state population, but had only 32.6 percent of the vote last Tuesday. In 1960, the population figure was 43.1 percent, and the vote figure, 42.4 percent.

In contrast, the suburbs and upstate consistently have a higher vote percentage than population percentage. The two Long Island counties, for example, have 14.4 percent of the population, according to Census Bureau estimates as of July 1975, but had 15.9 percent of the statewide vote last week.

Westchester and Rockland have 6.1 percent of the state population and 7.3 percent of the vote. In New York City, all the counties, including predominantly white Queens and Richmond, have a lower voter percentage than population percentage.

Upstate Cities Show Rise

The four counties that include the state's largest upstate cities—Erie County (Buffalo), Monroe (Rochester), Onondaga (Syracuse) and Albany (Albany)—the population is 14.1 percent of the statewide total, but the vote last week was 16.5 percent. In those counties, inner-city decline and lower voter turnout is more than counterbalanced by sprawling suburbs that now surround every upstate city and are included in the same county as the inner cities.

The gap between population and vote is widest in the Bronx and Brooklyn. Brooklyn has 13.4 percent of the state population but only 9.4 percent of the statewide vote. The comparable figures in the Bronx are 7.5 percent of population and 5.1 percent of vote.

Editors Get Advice on How to Halt Decline in Newspaper Readership

By DEIRDRE CARMODY

It has been a kind of American newspaper tradition for the news side of a newspaper to look askance on suggestions or anything resembling pressure from the business side, on the belief that freedom of the press is best served this way.

Yesterday, 350 editors from newspapers around the country were told that, if they wanted their newspapers to survive, they had better begin listening to what their marketing directors were telling them.

Newspaper circulation is dropping in general as a result of a number of factors, including television, changing reading habits and demographic shifts. In order to find out why and how to combat it, marketers and researchers are conducting extensive readership surveys in communities all over the country.

"The problem is that many editors bristle at the slightest attempt by advertising or market/research people to make suggestions on editorial content," Harold R. Livvendahl, vice president and director of sales at The Chicago Tribune, told members of the Associated Press Managing Editors, who are holding their annual meeting at the New York Hilton Hotel this week.

"Some editors take suggestions like these as efforts to subvert the First Amendment," he said.

Change in Lifestyles Cited

Mr. Livvendahl pointed out that during the last decade newspaper readership has declined by just under 4 percent. It has dropped by 10 percent among 18-to-24-year-olds and has cost the newspaper industry 2.5 million readers, he said.

Not only have young readers dropped off, but changing lifestyles and values seem to be causing older readers to defect, too, he said. And since advertisers "always try to put their money on a winner," newspapers are likely to lose a large chunk of that revenue to television and magazines, Mr. Livvendahl said.

He suggested that some successful means of attracting advertisers were a new regular feature, a special in-depth feature within an existing section, pull-out sections and zoned circulation, at reduced advertising rates, in which the advertisements run only in a small area instead of in the entire distribution area.

Charles M. Halks, director of research of The Detroit News, suggested that a major factor was better organization of the newspaper so that it was easier to read. He said that newspapers tended to think of the competition simply as television or magazines, whereas "we compete with everything else a person can do with discretionary time."

Changes in Papers Described

The increased emphasis on leisure time has produced a number of changes in many newspapers, which were described at other panels at the meeting. They included increased sports coverage (one newspaper reported a great deal of reader interest in women's sports), more consumer information, and recipes, fashions, features and stories about "how to cope."

Newspapers were also reported making greater use of graphics, and labeling pages, such as "The Campaign." Some are running the index of the paper's contents on the front page, and brightening up the paper with lively writing.

The Tribune of Des Moines, Iowa, ran a map of how to get to all the hospitals in the area. The Record of Hackensack, N.J., ran one of all the golf courses in the area. The Record also prints almost any notices that readers submit, including who made the Dean's list.

One editor after another said that this might not be in the tradition of the highest journalistic excellence, but that it was what the readers indicated they wanted.

"The First Amendment guarantees freedom of the press, but it doesn't require people to read newspapers," Mr. Livvendahl said. "If we don't satisfy our readers, someone else will."

Office Management Tightened by Codd to Cope With Cuts

Commissioner Michael J. Codd yesterday announced the establishment of a special team to help the Police Department cope with a reduction of nearly 10 percent in the force in the last two years because of the city's financial difficulties.

The initial step in a "major recasting" of the department, Commissioner Codd said, was the formation of a new group of 80 police and civil-division specialists to examine the department's "structure, policies, programs and resource allocations and recommend changes that will promote efficiency and effectiveness."

Commissioner Codd said some structural changes had already begun. A merger of the two units that monitor daily operations and emergencies is nearly completed. It is calculated to speed reaction to incidents and at the same time to enable the staff to be cut from 66 to perhaps 54 persons.

Detective Bureau Made Slimmer

Furthermore, the Commissioner said, two administrative units within the Detective Bureau are being eliminated, so 15 detectives will be available for duty elsewhere, and four of the 27 superior officers in the Youth Division are to be reassigned while seven officers are added.

The additions will bring the youth investigative force to 50.

The Commissioner said he was also consolidating all the department's labor-relations activities into a single Office of Labor Policy.

Assistant Chief Henry R. Morse, named to head the management team—to be known as the Office Management Analysis—said the department was also planning to try a single commander over the narcotics and public-morals units in borough headquarters.

Chief Morse noted that in addition to the laying off of more than 3,000 officers, a hiring freeze had been in effect since October 1974, leading to the loss by attrition of 2,000 more officers.

Thus, he said, in the last two years the strength of the department has fallen from 31,370 officers to 25,789. And the attrition is continuing at the rate of 125 to 130 men a month, he noted.

First Restructuring Since 1974

It was in the face of this pressure that Commissioner Codd ordered the start of the first major structural changes in the department since he took command on Jan. 1, 1974.

Talking with a reporter as he was being chauffeured to a luncheon at Grace Mansion yesterday, the gray-haired Commissioner said: "We're going to re-examine every blessed thing we're doing. This is going to mean the adjustment of units—perhaps the abolition of some, the consolidation of others—and the reallocation of personnel and equipment."

As manpower has dwindled, Commissioner Codd has sacrificed administrative and rear-echelon units in an attempt to protect the size of the street patrol force. The result, Chief Morse said, has been that while the patrol force has been cut by 8 percent, some other units have lost up to 40 percent of their men.

Commissioner Codd said that the management team would become a permanent part of the department and that he expected it to have a dramatic impact within six months to a year.

The consolidation of the department's labor activities comes as the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, remaining locked in a long and bitter dispute with the city administration over back pay and work schedules.

Inspector Patrick J. Murphy, who will head the new Office of Labor Policy, said the department would also assume a more active role in explaining developments in negotiations between the city and the union to the rank and file.

"In the past we've kind of left it to the union," he said, "but we don't really believe the union is doing a good job. There's a lot of factionalization in the union. The department has a responsibility to see that its employees are informed, and we want to insure that they are."

Pupils See Teacher Shot to Death

DETROIT, Nov. 10 (UPI)—An elementary school teacher was shot to death today in her classroom in front of her 30 pupils in the first and second grade. The police said that the gunman barged into the classroom and shot Betye McCaster, 45 years old, at least twice in the head. She died instantly. The police later arrested a man they believed to be her estranged husband in connection with the slaying.

Beame Seeks Realty-Tax Change to Offset Loss From Overdue Pay

By STEVEN R. WEISMAN

Mayor Beame is quietly seeking a change in the way the city calculates its real estate tax rate, to permit future increases that take into account the revenues lost from property owners who are delinquent in their tax payments.

Although the proposal, which was disclosed by city officials yesterday, is still being put together, it has become a key element of the city's still unannounced program to achieve an additional $500 million in budget saving for the next fiscal year.

However, it has already drawn criticism as a "gimmick" from two taxpayer groups and has raised "concern" in the office of City Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin.

"If they try this, they're going to have a half-dozen lawsuits around their necks," said Herbert J. Ranschburg, the director of research for the Citizens Budget Commission, an association of business and real estate interests. "It's a questionable type of fiscal sleight of hand. We're opposed to it, and we won't be the only ones."

Donald D. Kummerfeld, the city's Budget Director, responded, "This is absolutely not a gimmick." He said the change was being sought to keep the rate from going down next year, rather than to force it up. The tax rate this year is $8.795 per $100 of assessed valuation, an increase of more than 60 cents from last year.

Nevertheless, Mr. Kummerfeld, acknowledged that the change could lead to tax-rate increases in the future that are "higher than the way the tax is currently calculated."

In essence, the proposed calculation would allow the city to keep its tax rate at a level higher than that imposed by the cost of debt service, to which the tax rate is supposed to be pegged by statute.

Earlier this week, Beame administration officials disclosed that they had found a way to soften the need for the $500 million in budget cuts by bringing down the cost of debt service, which is the amount of interest and principal used to retire bonds and notes.

The city had been expecting to issue $375 million in bonds this month, to be purchased by the pension funds for its cash needs. Now it has found that it can afford to postpone a substantial portion of this borrowing, thereby reducing the debt service cost for next year—the third and final year of its recovery plan—by as much as $75 million.

But the city would normally have to follow suit by reducing its real estate tax rate, which is calculated through a formula that is based on the cost of debt service—the amount of interest and principal used to retire bonds and notes.

How Proposal Would Work

To keep the tax rate at the higher level, the Beame administration has come up with its new proposal. It calls for the city to set a tax rate that would yield a certain sum of money after tax delinquencies occur.

In a hypothetical example, if the city wanted to raise $1.5 billion for debt service next year, the tax would be $8.84. If the debt service cost was reduced by $50 million, the city would then assume that the $1.45 billion was the sum required to be raised after tax delinquencies, which are running at about 7 percent.

The city would then establish $1,559 billion as its debt-service base, since a 7 percent delinquency on this base would lead to the needed $1.45 billion, and the tax would be set at $9.

The idea of incorporating the delinquent-tax projections into the tax base was embodied in little noticed legislation approved several weeks ago by the City Council. On the day Mayor Beame held hearings on it, however, Councilman Edward Dowdy, Democrat of Queens, said it because of what he needed technical changes.

Other city officials said they were withdrawn because of a similar proposal raised by Comptroller Goldin and the Citizens Tax Commission.

An official in Mr. Goldin's office yesterday said, "We are concerned about the future effects of this proposal. We are reviewing it to assure that it does not represent a return to the 'mickery of the past.'"

Mr. Kummerfeld defended the proposal yesterday as a way of helping to close its $500 million deficit as required by law. "Look, he said, 'it is obviously in the real estate tax. We don't create it, but we can't afford it.'"

Mr. Ranschburg said the proposal would give the city a check to raise the property tax and higher levels. Mr. Kummerfeld denied that this was

INTRODUCING THE FIRST ELECTRONIC SEWING MACHINE THAT COSTS A LOT LESS THAN SOME ORDINARY SEWING MACHINES. WHICH IS RATHER EXTRAORDINARY.

When Singer introduced electronic sewing in 1975, our first machine was more expensive than the most expensive mechanical machine.

Now we're introducing the world's second electronic machine. This one is less expensive.

Which means Singer was not only first to revolutionize sewing with electronics, we're first to give it a conventional price.

And that means we've made it possible for you to own the most astonishing concept in sewing machines since the sewing machine.

Because now sewing is suddenly so simple, so foolproof, it's the difference between artistry and drudgery.

Like all electronics, the new Diana® 560 machine is made with a brain. A tiny pre-programmed memory bank that replaces the 120 mechanical parts that control stitch selection in the conventional machine.

To tell the brain what you want, you simply press a button. Then the brain tells the needle what to do. You can sew 12 stitch patterns, change stitches without stopping the machine. Make a buttonhole automatically. Do all kinds of creative sewing without levers. Or cams. Or discs to change.

What's more, because we've replaced so many moving parts with electronic circuits, the Diana 560 machine is quieter than mechanical machines. And smoother. And lighter.

The Diana 560 machine. The world's second electronic sewing machine. Everything about it is extraordinary.

West Point Cadets Will Assume Responsibility for Honor Code

By JAMES FERON
Special to The New York Times

WEST POINT, N.Y., Nov. 10—West Point cadets voted by a wide margin last night to assume complete responsibility for the adjudication of suspected honor code violators, eliminating officer review boards, while seeking to improve legal safeguards in the newly strengthened cadet boards.

The referendum, approved by 85 percent of the 4,000-member corps of cadets, emerged from the United States Military Academy's worst cheating scandal in history after three months of study by cadets and officers and approval by the Department of Defense.

Under the changes, Army lawyers will play major roles before cadet boards, where they did not appear at all before. Jurors will be selected from the corps at large as well as from the honor committee, and a 10-to-2 vote will replace the unanimous vote formerly required for a guilty verdict.

The intention was to consolidate responsibility for honor code enforcement within the corps of cadets while improving the process, which had been criticized by cadets, Army lawyers and members of Congress as often lacking in due process.

Dramatic Single Change

The most dramatic single change in the traditional procedure was the elimination of the review boards of officers. They have served as a second, or appeal, stage for cadets judged guilty by their peers of violating the honor code, which prohibits lying, cheating, stealing or tolerating those who do.

The officer boards also had represented the first stage of legal representation for cadets. Under the new procedures, one Army lawyer will serve as trial attorney, another as defense counsel and a third as an adviser to the cadet board, or legal moderator.

Maj. William Smullen, a spokesman for West Point, said the moderator "will be there as an impartial arbiter to balance matters." He said, however, that the arbiter's role would not be that of a judge.

Major Smullen said the composition of the cadet board would also be modified. While four of its 12 members will come from the honor committee, which consists only of juniors and seniors, the eight others will now be selected from the corps at large.

"At least two will come from each of three classes and the other two from classes designated by the accused," he said. In other words, a plebe, or freshman, who finds no plebes among the jurors will be able to ask that one or two be selected from that class.

Investigating Panels

The three-member investigating panels, equivalent to grand juries, are to be expanded under the referendum to five-member units, with the two new members also selected from outside the honor committee.

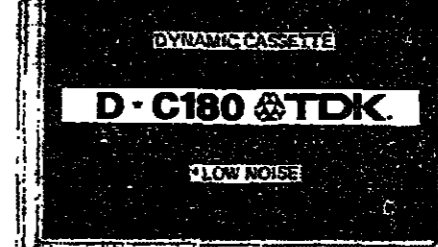

Selection of the "outsiders" on both the cadet board panels and the investigation units, however, will remain within control of the honor committee and Academy officers responsible for honor matters and discipline.

Another change approved by the cadets in the single referendum was elimination of the unanimous verdict required to establish guilt. The new requirement of only 10 votes should make prosecution easier and acquittal through bribery more difficult.

Although difficult to prove, bribery of jurors had become a factor over the years, according to some cadets. Sums of up to $1,000 reportedly had changed hands in efforts by accused cadets to find the single vote that would bar prosecution and perhaps save a career.

200 Attend Queens Mass for Student Killed During R.O.T.C. Exercise

By PETER KIBBS

The day started chilling, drizzling yesterday. But then a bright sun came out, and it was almost a symbol of the promise of resurrection being affirmed in the Roman Catholic Mass for the mourning family of Thomas Fitzgerald.

Two hundred people attended the funeral service for Mr. Fitzgerald, who was stabbed to death with a bayonet in a college Reserve Officers Training Corps exercise last Friday night.

His former Regis High School guidance counselor, the Rev. Robert Voelkle, voiced the homily in the family's parish Church of St. Teresa of the Child Jesus, at 44th Street and 50th Avenue, Woodside, Queens.

Father Voelkle said he had prayed, and then in his thoughts he had "met Tom," and "I said: 'Tom, what do you want me to say? What does it all mean?' And then some peace came." He went on:

"We are celebrating, sympathizing the senseless, macho, violent death of a great guy by re-presenting on this altar the senseless, macho, violent death of Jesus Christ Our Lord."

"Then it does make sense, because violence, even though it is something deep in the heart of every society, is not this way to manhood."

Rather, Father Voelkle said: "Love is what it is all about. Tom was a lover. When you love enough, you can go home. Tom took over for his dad, and made life rich, delightful, interesting for his mother, because he loved her."

Reading by Regis Headmaster

It was also the message that the celebrant of the Mass of Resurrection, the Rev. Robert R. Newton, Regis headmaster, chose from the Book of Wisdom: "The just man, though he die early, shall be at rest."

"He who pleased God," he quoted, "was loved; he who lived among sinners was transported—snatched away... for his soul was pleasing to the Lord."

They were words of comfort that seemed to assuage the tears with which the widowed mother, Agnes, had come into the church, following her son's coffin with his surviving brother and sisters—four days short of 20 years of age when he died, he had been youngest of 10 children.

At least 20 of his former Regis classmates—out of 106 graduates in June 1974—had come to be a guard of honor and pallbearers. Also present were about 20 members of the St. John's University

R.O.T.C. unit to which Mr. Fitzgerald, a Queens College junior, belonged and in whose training he died.

Ray Girny, now a student at Fordham, said the Regis group had "always tried to stay close." He added: "Tom exemplified all the qualities you'd want in a friend. Tom was the kind of person who was always out to help as many people as he could."

One of the St. John's R.O.T.C. members, preferring not to give his name, said, "I feel a very deep regret—the death should not have taken place." Another said the exercise had been planned as "a good program to make better officers."

Chaplains From St. John's

St. John's was officially represented by two chaplains, the Rev. Joseph Keefe, vice president of the university, and the Rev. Frank Keyes, who donned white vestments to symbolize the resurrection—instead of the black of the days before Vatican II—to join the mass. Among those praying in civilian clothes was St. John's R.O.T.C. commander, Lieut. Col. James R. Rafferty.

Mr. Fitzgerald, his mother, brother and one sister had been members of the parish for the last two years, according to the pastor, the Rev. Raymond Morgan.

Father Newton voiced the final prayer that Christ the Good Shepherd might lead the dead youth "safely home to be at peace with God our Father" and all the saints. Then the last pilgrimage took the body to Pineslawn Memorial Park in Farmingdale.

Far away, James Savino, 21 years old, a Stevens Institute of Technology senior, who was a fellow member of the R.O.T.C. Pershing Rifles unit, remained held without bail in Suffolk County jail in Riverhead. He has been charged with second-degree murder in what police called "a combination war game and hazing" and what his counsel, Harold Borg, said was an accident in a training program.

Florida Man Indicted for Murder

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., Nov. 10. (AP)—A grand jury has issued kidnapping and murder indictments against a Pompano Beach painter accused in the death of an 8-year-old girl. The Broward County grand jury charged yesterday that James Rose, 30, had abducted Lisa Lynn Berry from a bowling alley, killed her and left her body in a weed-choked canal 12 miles away.

Island Where Killing Took Place Known as Site of Illicit Activities

By ARI L. GOLDMAN

INDIAN ISLAND, L.I., Nov. 10—This mile-square nature sanctuary has been the scene of many forbidden activities in the last few years—hunting, camping, the making of fires, and beer-drinking. Last Friday night, it became the scene of a murder.

It was on this small island in the Great South Bay that 19-year-old Thomas Fitzgerald was stabbed to death during a Reserve Officers Training Corps unit program. The incident has been called "an accidental hazing" during an initiation rite for the Pershing Rifles honor society, but the police continued to search the island today for more information about the killing.

The people who live across the canal from the island in a section called American Venice, in the Town of Babylon, said that they hoped the incident would lead to the stopping of illegal activities. "I'm not surprised by anything that happens over there," said Raymond Weir, who lives on the canal.

Mr. Weir, 68, said that the tin roof of his small house was pockmarked by the shells from the guns of those illegally hunting on the island. Noise from beer parties sometimes gets so bad, he said, that he has had to call the county park rangers, who are responsible for patrolling the area.

The rangers have seized on the incident to complain about cutback in personnel. Robert Mackreth, the secretary of the Suffolk County Park Ranger Benevolent Association, appeared before the County Legislature yesterday and said the death could have been avoided if there had been more patrols.

The Legislature was considering the 1977 county budget, which would trim the current ranger staff by layoffs from 92 to 25.

"Abolition of ranger positions must not be approved," Mr. Mackreth told the Legislature. "Instead, all existing vacancies must be filled. It is too late to save the life of Thomas Fitzgerald, but perhaps other such deaths may be prevented."

Cuts Later Approved

The Legislature later approved the cuts.

Indian Island was acquired by the county in 1965 from a private owner. A footbridge that once connected the island to the mainland was later taken down by the county to preserve the area as a nature sanctuary.

The only way to cross the 50-foot canal now is by boat, and it was a rubber raft that brought Mr. Fitzgerald and 23 other R.O.T.C. members to the island last week. The rangers complain that they do not even have a boat at their disposal and must borrow a small craft from residents to patrol the area.

This morning, Frank Losasso, a county ranger, borrowed a boat and took a visitor to the island.

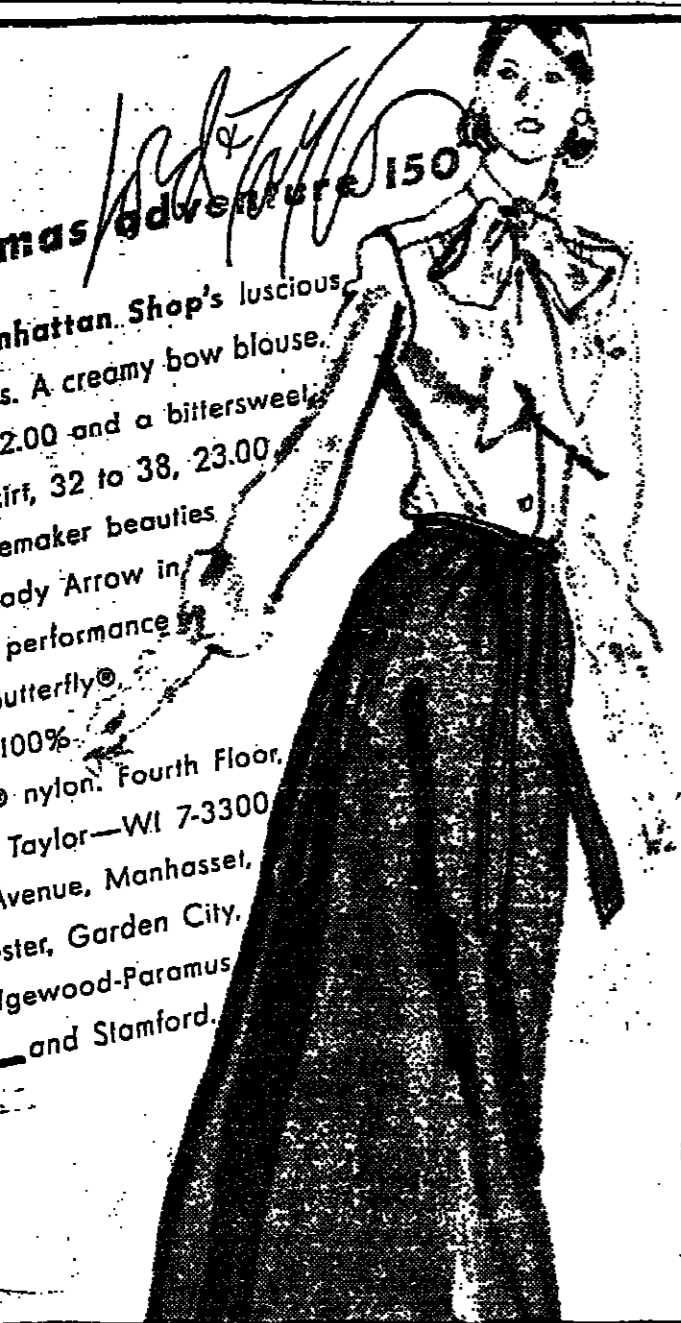

Thick brush with 8-foot reeds covers most of the perimeter of the small island. But after penetrating 30 to 40 feet of brush, one comes to a wide clearing of sand. Beer bottles, spent rifle shells and camp-fire settings are scattered about the sand in the clearing, which is protected from the harsh winds of the Great South Bay by the foliage. A path through tall reeds leads to another clearing. It is there that Mr. Fitzgerald was stabbed with a bayonet.

Detectives were busy today examining the scene and taking measurements in what Chief of Detectives David Buckley called "routine investigative procedures following a homicide."

"It's a tragedy," said Mr. Losasso, as he watched a police launch go by. "If we had the manpower to have been here before, this might have been avoided."

3 reasons Citibank's 48-Month Car Loan makes more sense than the loan most people get.

- 1. You pay less each month. So you have more each month.
If you're like most people, you may think a 36-month loan is the most sensible way to finance a car. Not so. On any amount over $3,500, you can get a Citibank 48-Month Car Loan and pay less each month—about $30 less on a $3,500 loan. And because you pay less, you have more to sock away or invest or spend on other things.
- 2. You pay a lower annual percentage rate of only 11.4%.
You may also think the percentage rate on a short-term car loan is lower than on a longer loan. Not so. The rate on a Citibank 48-Month Car Loan is a low 11.4%. Compared to over 13% on most 36-month loans offered by banks.
- 3. You can get it faster and easier on The Loan Phone.
You may think you have to make a special trip to the bank to apply for a car loan. Not so. You can apply for Citibank's 48-Month Car Loan just by calling The Loan Phone. Or, if you prefer, you can still visit any one of our 270 convenient branches. The Citibank 48-Month Car Loan. The easy way is the sensible way, too. Call or see us before November 13.

About New York

Indians Who Don't Fit the Stereotype

We have all heard something of the city's American Indian community: Iroquois ironworkers sure-footed above the white man on the skeletal frames of new skyscrapers. And so forth and so on toward another of the peculiar legends that whites seem to prefer for reds.

Now, however, many of the ironworking Indians, left jobless by the city's great construction depression, have gone back to Canadian reservations or to places more promising in jobs. And many of the remaining American Indians are even more interesting than soaring ironworkers.

They are the Indians who were born here in the first place and who have had a special sort of half-life troubled not only by racial bias but also by isolation from tribal roots and places and by a search for identity that can flare up suddenly on the mean streets, often to their own amazement.

Such a moment came in the life of Barbara Nehemias, Bronx-born of a Mohican mother, during her junior year at Aquinas Hall High School when she decided to challenge conventional parochial school history on the early Catholic missionaries who worked and died trying to convert Indians.

She had begun reading books offering Indian-oriented history. That, plus her mother's care to make sure she spent part of each summer back at the reservation in St. Regis in upstate New York, and her childhood frustrations at hearing herself and her brother called silly names like "Powow," plus courses on the spot led her to write a book review that "stunned the nuns," as she recalled.

"I said Isaac Joques had no right to Christianize the Indians, and that when the stories of his torture were examined there should be little surprise that he was abused, in turn, for meddling with another culture."

Strong medicine, as Indians say in the movies. And from there Miss Nehemias became "active and vocal," first as an SEIU student at City College, then as a dropout who went back to the St. Regis reservation for two years to think about things, and eventually to get bored with the ruralness of things.

She traveled back from birthright to birthplace and works now at the task of trying to reach the 10,000 Indians scattered through the city in her job as a communications specialist at the American Indian Community House on East 38th Street.

Sometimes this job means putting down invitations to tawdry promotion schemes. "A television news crew wanted to get us involved in a Thanksgiving dinner thing, and I had to explain that, to me, Thanksgiving was the Last Supper."

City-born Indians generally get knowledge of the family reservation only through a relative's tales, with life otherwise being a non-Indian experience.

In his childhood in Flushing and Brooklyn, Harvey Wallace heard from an uncle about lies to the Shinnecock reservation tucked away in Long Island's fashionable Hamptons. He does not say so, but Mr. Wallace's commitment to Indian culture, as job program director at the Community House, seems rooted not in any campfire carping but in the most exotic sort of experience. This was in being singled out through the accident on his heritage for special minority program eligibility at Dartmouth College (Class of '78) where, he said, he came to know what sorts of ostracism the world can offer.

"Dartmouth became a tool to serve the Indian community, nothing more," he said. Mr. Wallace did not elaborate, but he left the suggestion that he had found a bit of Wounded Knee at Hanover.

On DeGraw Street in South Brooklyn, Muriel Miguel, an actress with the handsome dark beauty of her Rappahannock and Cuna tribal backgrounds, lives in the plain frame house her grandmother knew seven decades ago when she was a midwife fresh from the Virginia reservation. Miss Miguel's life seems a telescopic race from childhood prejudice and poverty through several great militancies of our time: particularly feminism and the American Indian Movement.

Now she is off on her own somewhat as the director of the Spiderwoman Theatre Workshop, a free-wheeling acting group of six women who attempt rather scathing indictments of male abuse of females and females' abuse of one another, even in the unlikely setting of the feminist movement.

"Spiderwoman is the spirit who gave the gift of weaving to the Hopi," Miss Miguel explained. "She taught them to leave a flaw in the weave in order to let the spirit escape. On stage, we weave our personal stories into a tapestry about women and the kinds of violence they experience."

The group's arrows seem to spare no one, even some of the males of the AIM movement who, Miss Miguel recalls, would plan great egalitarian protests yet always seem to put a woman to making the coffee.

"A lot of women at Wounded Knee participated just as heavily as the men," she said. "But when you're used as a recreation and not as a person, that's no revolution. It's the same old thing."

Her sister and Spiderwoman colleague, Gloria Mojica, agrees and tells of the roundabout ways an Indian woman can attempt to pass cultural muster. In her case, her pure Indian features attracted taunts in her childhood from what she called "Mafia neighbors" on President Street, and eventually she became the wife of a white professor at Oberlin. This marriage failed as did her sister's marriage to a white.

"The whole faculty wife trip," she said, smiling at the thoroughness of her attempt. "We were freaks as children," she said. "And we ran away from the hurt as soon as we could."

The sisters made no dramatic assertions to prevail now that they have readjusted to their city roots. But they bore witness to the fact that there is much more than ironworking to the life of the city's own Indians.

Trial Delayed for a Day as Juror Won't Pay $60 for Insulin Shot

A criminal trial involving an alleged plot to bomb a Manhattan restaurant was delayed for a day because one juror refused to pay $60 for a 35-cent insulin shot.

Justice Thomas Dickens of State Supreme Court excused the 12 jurors, two alternates, an assistant district attorney, two defense lawyers and six court attendants on Tuesday—at an estimated cost of $800—because of the incident.

The trial itself, The Associated Press reported, ended yesterday in acquittal. Identification problems resulting from two look-alikes led to the dropping of a charge of attempted arson against the defendant, Lawrence Guarino, about 35 years old. The target was Squire's Restaurant, at Madison Avenue and 32d Street, where there had been an altercation.

The balking juror was Raymond Beckett, a senior consultant with the job service unit of the State Department of Labor at the World Trade Center, who suffers from diabetes and a heart ailment.

Mr. Beckett forgot to take his insulin injection in the confusion of a fire in his Upper East Side apartment building Tuesday morning. He was sent to Beekman Downtown Hospital for an injection when he informed the Court that he needed it to avoid going into a coma.

However, Mr. Beckett was awaiting replacement of a broken medical bracelet identifying him as a diabetic, and he had no medical papers with him.

The hospital declined to give him the injection unless he agreed to pay a $60 fee. An administrator said personnel would first have to check with Mr. Beckett's doctor and then would have to use the emergency room or a doctor's office to administer the injection. Mr. Beckett refused to pay the fee, protesting that it was an outrageous price for the service, and was turned away.

"I think it's criminal," Mr. Beckett said after returning home and giving himself the injection. "I guess Blue Cross would have paid it, but then my medical insurance would have gone up. I'm damned if I was going to sign a paper for $60."

POTTSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 10 (AP)—Arson was blamed for a $100,000 fire that wrecked a cafeteria building at the Pine Forge Academy in nearby Douglas Township, Fire Marshal Edward Gleason said today. The building's interior had been doused with diesel fuel, Marshal Gleason said. Investigators also found a tray of fuel leading 135 feet to the building from a large container, he said. There were no injuries.

Bridge:

Swedish Education Program Produces Good Young Stars

By ALAN TRUSCOTT

If one had to pick a country to win a world title in the next decade that has never won one in the past, the selection would have to be Sweden. Thanks in part to their state-backed programs of bridge education for teenagers, the Swedes have a formidable number of brilliant young players.

One of these is Per-Olov Sundelin, who is currently leading in the Philip Morris European Cup, a bridge Grand Prix that stretches through a season of tournaments in many cities.

Sundelin had occasion to admire the play of his partner, Hans Lind, when they won the most recent grand prix event played in The Hague, the Netherlands, three weeks ago. The contract was four hearts, reached with all possible speed after West had made a take-out double of the opening bid.

Club Ace Wins Opener

Not being clairvoyant, Lind took the trump finesse at the second trick after winning the first trick with the club ace. The odds in favor of the finesse are almost three to one, and it is very seldom right to play for the drop.

West won with his singleton heart king, and made a subtle play by leading a low diamond. He knew that if left to himself the declarer would lead to the diamond jack and score two tricks in the suit.

As it was, South had to consider the possibility that West had underled from a diamond holding of A-x-x-x, in which case the normal play of the jack would probably allow the defense to score two diamond tricks and a diamond ruff, with down two the likely result.

Lind did not fall into this small trap, since playing the king from dummy, to guard against a two-trick defeat.

When Couples Married

By CHRISTOPHER LEHMANN-HAUPT

MARRY ME. A Romance. By John Updike. 303 pages. Knopf, $7.95.

At a distance, one can make out what John Updike is up to in "Marry Me: A Romance," the eighth and 20th book he has published in his prodigiously productive career. At a distance, one can discern that he has written a more or less psychologically realistic story, yet framed it in such a way that we aren't supposed to identify with the characters or take their problems too seriously. The story concerns two suburban Connecticut couples, Jerry and Ruth Conant and Richard and Sally Mathias, each of whom has three young children, Jerry Conant and Sally Mathias are in the midst of a heated affair with each other—an affair of winey beach trysts, secret trips to Washington, and 10 A.M. telephone talks in the presence of the babysitter. They would like to leave their respective partners but must cope with questions of loyalty, the children, God's punishment and the possibility that they only desire each other because of their mutual unavailability. Their passion is realistically played out, at least to the extent that Mr. Updike evokes, as only he can with his exact and graceful prose, precisely what it must feel like to be caught in such an untenable yet compelling predicament.

Yet at the same time, he tries to push the reader away from this story, or rather he tries to pull the story away from his reader. He subtitles the novel "A Romance," as if to make light of its domestic storm and stress. He sets its time in the early years of the Kennedy Presidency, as if to say this happened long ago in quite another era. He assigns Jerry Conant the profession of cartoonist-animator, with the specific job, during the time of the story, of creating "a series of 30-second spots plugging freedom in underdeveloped countries"; he fills his descriptive passages with references to paintings and photographs, and he refuses to describe Jerry and Sally's infatuation with each other in anything but the most clichéd terms—all as if to remind us that this was a time of illusion when images mattered more than substances.

Midlife Anxieties

He even seems to denigrate the images that perhaps still ought to matter because the substances they reflect can never be known, except through faith—the midlife anxiety over death that moves Jerry to see in Sally the possibility of temporal paradise, or the Puritan sense of sin that interferes with his decision to commit himself to her. As Jerry himself says at one point, "Maybe our trouble is that we live in the twilight of the old morality, and there's just enough to torment us, and not enough to hold us in."

And just in case we have gotten too caught up in the realistic predicament of the story, Mr. Updike has provided three different endings—one in which Jerry goes off with Sally to their dream-state of Wyoming; one in which he travels with his wife and children for a recuperative stay in the south of France and one in which he goes by himself to St. Croix and discovers in "the existence of this place . . . a dimension in which he did go, as was right . . . and stand, timid and exultant, above the downcast eyes of her gracious, sorrowing face, and say to Sally, 'Marry Me.'" It's as if Mr. Updike were saying, take your pick; it's all quaint and illusory, however it turns out.

Weighing and Writhing

The trouble, at least for this reader, is that it's never quaint and illusory. One grows too deeply involved in the domestic drama, weighs too seriously the relative claims of familial responsibility and erotic passion, takes Mr. Updike too much at his incomparably seductive word. One worries about the children, even though, surprisingly, they are described as if they were merely objects (perhaps Mr. Updike has done so in order to even up the case for infidelity). One writes in sympathy for the betrayed, especially since they invariably behave as good generous sports (amazing how Mr. Updike retains the reader's sympathy for everyone involved in the story). One cheers when, during a confrontation scene between the two couples, Ruth Conant remarks: "If we all had to sweat for our food we wouldn't have time for this—this folly. We're all so spoiled we stink."

In short, I cared about the people in "Marry Me" and I found their psychologically realistic problems altogether relevant to present times. So everything that Mr. Updike does to distance me from his story—from shrugging it off as a mere "romance" to indulging his tendency to write show-offy descriptive passages—came at me like so many slaps in the face. Of course it may be that I am hopelessly behind the times in taking the moral issues of "Marry Me" seriously. Or it may be that Mr. Updike has written a novel ahead of its times, and that in another decade or so its now undetectable ironies will come into relief and it will seem, like several other Updike novels, such as "The Centaur" and "Of the Farm," a better book than it first appeared. But for the time being at least, by taking the subjects of marital fidelity and the viability of the nuclear family, and treating them as if they were quaint anachronisms, Mr. Updike seems less to have ascended to a long-run perspective and more to have simply ducked important issues.

WORLD CHESS OLYMPIAD IS WON BY THE U.S. TEAM

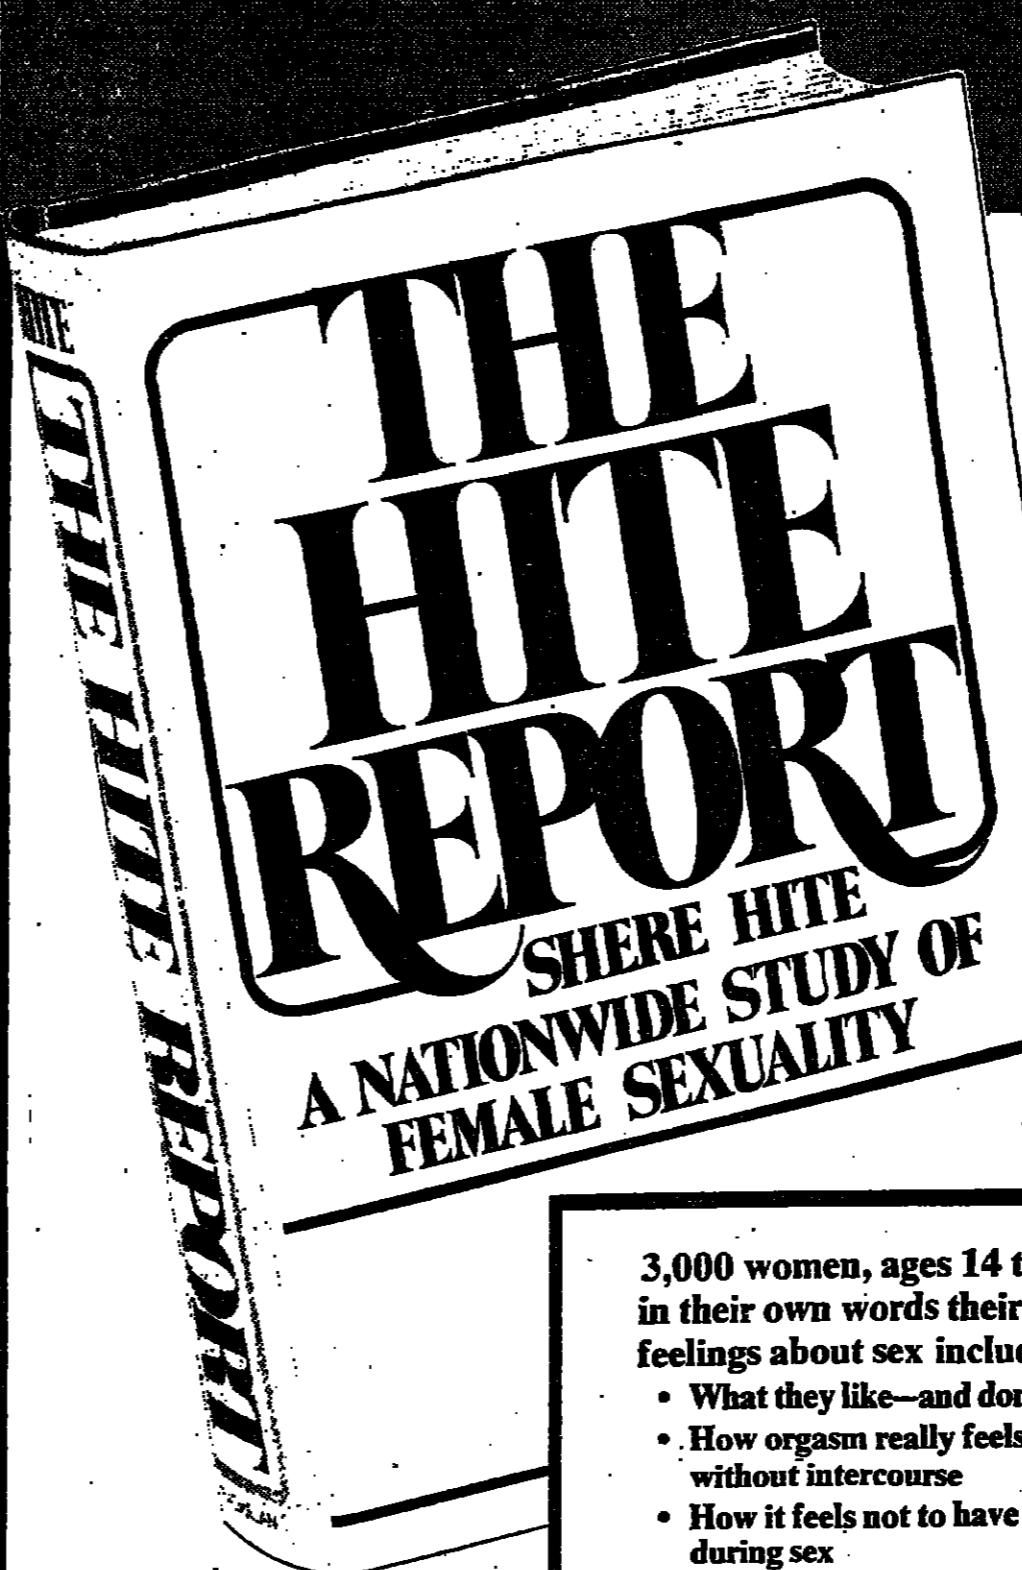

HAIFA, Israel, Nov. 10 (Reuters)—The United States won the World Chess Olympiad here today, taking a title held for 24 years by the Soviet Union, which declined to take part in this year's competition. The United States team led by Robert Byrne, finished with 37 points. The Netherlands was the runner-up with 36½ points and England was third with 35½.

The Soviet Union and other Communist states did not take part in the biennial competition because it was held in Israel, with which they have no diplomatic relations.

The United States clinched the title by defeating Wales 3½-½, while the Dutch team in its last game only managed a 3-1 victory over Finland.

The final game, which determined the championship, was between Franz Kufner of the Netherlands and Ilmari Saven of Finland. It lasted 14 hours, ending after 112 moves in a draw.

School Bias Charge . . .

The charges of discrimination leveled against the city's public school system by the Federal Government contain an odd mixture of legitimate and illogical criticism. The report by the Civil Rights Office of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare exposes practices which work to the detriment of racial minorities and of women in the competition for teaching and supervisory jobs. Regrettably, the investigators have confused what is theoretically desirable with what is practically attainable.

The report is on firm ground when it challenges some of the examination and licensing procedures which erect higher hurdles in this city than exist in other school systems. Some of these procedures for the licensing of teachers are currently in litigation; others, affecting supervisors, have already been modified by the courts. But there can be little question that conservative forces in the system have consistently impeded reform.

This is also the reason for the snail's pace at which women have moved into supervisory posts—a particularly indefensible situation in a profession whose rank and file is predominantly female. The fact that women have fared better in this city's schools than almost anywhere else in the country is no valid reason why discriminatory barriers ought not to be a matter of concern to Federal investigators.

Far more questionable is the report's complaint that too many black and Puerto Rican teachers have been assigned to schools in which these minorities make up the majority of the student body. This criticism seems to ignore the fact that decentralization empowers local community school boards to hire teachers and supervisors. Indeed, the demand in predominantly black sections for greater numbers of black teachers and principals was among the key reasons for decentralization in the first place.

. . . Rational Response

School Chancellor Irving Anker has underscored the futility of discussing hiring procedures at a time when the system's major problem is one of laying off teachers. This does not make corrective steps irrelevant, if only to prevent discrimination in the rehiring of teachers as retirements or improved city finances may make it possible to bring back some of the dismissed teachers.

Mr. Anker is also right in pointing to his own efforts for legislative action designed to make teacher assignments more equitable. Unfortunately, the far more effective lobbying forces of the United Federation of Teachers and of the supervisory establishment helped to scuttle such proposals.

It would be a serious mistake for local school officials to dig in their heels against the Federal critique. It would be equally wrong for the Federal officials to threaten the withholding of hundreds of millions of Federal aid dollars—a penalty that could only make a bad situation worse, particularly for those minority children who desperately need better schools.

High-level representatives of the school system should meet as soon as possible with Federal officials. Much can be done to make the system more even-handed, but not necessarily along the lines suggested in the Federal report. The sensible course is to negotiate in good faith, with only one aim—to make the future better than the past.

Parking Ticket Politics

The laws and regulations governing parking are not at all mysterious. The city abounds with signs which explain where parking is or is not permitted. Fire hydrants are off-limits. Double-parking is illegal. New Yorkers should be entitled to assume that enforcement of these rules is considered by the police as a matter of routine, not of whim. And there can be no question that the parking and other traffic laws require a rigorous enforcement that they seldom receive.

Now the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association in its war of nerves against the city has alternately threatened a so-called ticket "blitz" and total indulgence of parking violations. The first tactic is intended to punish the citizenry; the second aims at depriving the city of its income from fines.

Neither course is acceptable. No community can tolerate a police force that turns law enforcement on and off like a faucet, to further its own interests by either rewarding or punishing the public or City Hall. An illegally parked car should invariably be ticketed not because of a temporary punitive "blitz" nor because the city wants the revenue, but because it is a violation of the law. The real problem has always been not that too many cars are ticketed but that too many violations are ignored.

The real problem has always been not that too many cars are ticketed but that too many violations are ignored.

A police force that makes a plaything of law enforcement jeopardizes respect for the law—and for the police. Whether the administration of the parking regulations is subjected to periodic ticketing "quotas" issued by higher police authority or to the whims and bargaining pressures of the police union, the immediate effect is to create confusion; the end result is contempt for all law enforcement.

The Northeast Organizes

Buoyed by hopes of a more sympathetic Administration in Washington, the governors of seven—and possibly more—Northeastern states will meet in Saratoga Springs this weekend with representatives of industry, labor and education to develop plans for obtaining more Federal assistance for regional redevelopment.

The governors have an impressive case for consideration in Washington. Consider these facts: in the past quarter century, the region has had the slowest population growth, the lowest per capita income increase and the highest unemployment in the nation. During the past year, according to a recent report from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, employment grew less than one-tenth of 1 percent in the Northeast, while it increased 2 percent in the North Central states, 2.3 percent in the South and 2.5 percent in the West.

Although the seven original members of the recently formed Coalition of Northeastern Governors—New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Vermont—contain 22.3 percent of the national population and account for 24.3 percent of the nation's personal income, they carry more than 25 percent of the Federal tax burden. In return for this substantial contribution to the national treasury, the coalition states receive only 14.5 percent of Federal airport allocations, 18 percent of national defense outlays, 20 percent of Federal commerce and transportation spending, 15 percent each of Economic Development grants and Highway Trust funds and 18 percent of Commodity Credit Corporation payments.

To correct this imbalance will require a sustained, and closely coordinated effort. The formation of the governors coalition, in which Governor Carey has played a leading role, and of a parallel grouping of Northeastern members of Congress represent a promising beginning. But concrete problems remain to be addressed if the region is to speak with a voice that commands respect in Washington.

One of these is the partisan nature of the gubernatorial alliance—all seven of whom are Democrats. Every effort should be made to include Republican Governor Thompson of New Hampshire and Independent Governor Longley of Maine—both of whom have been invited to the Saratoga Springs conference—and to retain Vermont, which has a Republican governor-elect. Even though Democrats will soon control the White House as well as both houses of Congress, the Northeast will need all the support it can muster to carry its weight in Washington in competition with other regions.

There is also weakness in the failure of the region so far seriously to address problems of mutual self-help—with the notable exception of initial studies of a proposal by Felix Rohatyn for the formation of a Regional Energy Development Corporation. To make a convincing case for Federal aid on a regional basis, the Northeastern states must begin to demonstrate their ability to work together to eliminate intraregional rivalries for industry and jobs, to coordinate planning in such areas as transportation, energy and industrial development, and to achieve common policies on such critical issues as the development of offshore oil resources with adequate environmental safeguards.

The meeting of the governors and other participants from the region in Saratoga Springs could be a first step to a Northeast that is united—not only in its demand for a fairer share of the Federal pie but in its determination to cooperate for mutual self-help.

Iceberg Shortage Ahead?

Mention icebergs and most people's minds immediately turn to thoughts of danger, to recollections of the Titanic sinking beneath the sea with terrible loss of life, after crashing into one of those huge, frozen masses in the North Atlantic. Such images begin in elementary school when children learn about the patrols that chart the number and paths of floating icebergs to warn ships and prevent repetition of a Titanic disaster.

But in a world where population, living standards and raw material needs are rising, the pressure on resources grows incessantly. Yesterday's useless or even harmful substance becomes today's—or tomorrow's—essential source of human requirements.

So it is now with icebergs, which are being eyed more and more as a relatively cheap source of water for desert and semi-desert areas. Several years ago, Dr. John Isaacs of the Scripps Institute of Oceanography suggested towing icebergs to Southern California from Antarctica and using the melted water from this source to supply the rapidly rising needs of Los Angeles, San Diego and neighboring communities.

Now Saudi Arabia has commissioned a study to investigate the practicality of towing 85-million-ton Antarctic icebergs 5,000 miles to the vicinity of the Saudi port of Jidda where the ice would be melted for drinking water and for irrigation. The price of a glass of iceberg water in Jidda, it is estimated, would be half the cost of a glass of water obtained by desalting seawater. Off the coast of St. John's, Newfoundland, icebergs are being studied and moved for a completely different reason: to free seabed areas so that drilling can be done for the oil and gas believed to lie under the icebergs.

No doubt the first icebergs to be moved long distances in order to water the deserts and to nourish the humans living there will be considered exotic, even bizarre, experiments. But if these experiments succeed, it will soon be realized that vast quantities of valuable water are frozen in the icebergs and major economic and legal questions will quickly arise. Who owns the icebergs floating in the Arctic and the Antarctic? How much should their owners, if any, be paid per million tons of ice? And sooner or later some imaginative economist will publish a projection forecasting an iceberg shortage by the year 2050 or 2075, the signal perhaps for the nations owning icebergs to get together in a cartel to impose the highest possible iceberg price they can extort from the rest of the world.

To anyone who thinks these prospects are fantastic, we suggest casting the mind back a few years to the days when everyone assumed that there were an infinite number of fish in the sea, and a shortage of fish seemed as unlikely then as a shortage of icebergs does now.

Science: 'Our Leadership Is in Danger'

To the Editor:

The recent sweep of the 1976 Nobel Prizes by U.S. scientists is a tribute both to the outstanding scientific contributions made by these individuals and to the system of science that has evolved in this country since the Second World War. Yet, while basking in the glow cast by these Nobel laureates, we must not lose sight of the fact that our world leadership in science and technology is in danger—as your editorial "Nobel Sweep" (Oct. 20) pointed out. The universities have been the keystone of basic research in the American system of science, but their ability to maintain a strong program of basic research is being undermined.

Several factors contribute to this alarming situation. Among the most serious are (1) the sharp decline in Federal support for university-based research over the past decade and (2) a projected downward trend in college enrollments during the 1980's due to a decrease in the college-age population. These factors have led to fewer academic jobs and, in turn, to an increasingly older faculty. Since most of the professors in this older group are still far from retirement, there will be limited opportunity for young scientists. Yet these are the people who must pick up the torch if we are to maintain a viable research capability in our universities. They are the Nobel laureates of the future.

The long-range implications of these trends are serious, but there are some hopeful signs. The National Science Foundation, the chief Federal supporter of basic research in universities, has had a major increase in its 1977 budget. The recent re-establishment of the Office of Science and Technology Policy in the White House—with bipartisan support—indicates that there will be more thought given by government to the role of science in solving national problems.

It is important that the public be aware of the difficulties faced by our universities and of the downward trend in support for research. Unless America increases its support for science—both at the Federal and the private level—we will be without the technologies needed to deal with problems in such areas as food resources, energy and environmental preservation.

Science in this country is still strong, but it will be endangered unless we attend to the problems faced by our universities and insure adequate support for basic research. The Times editorial has performed a valuable service in calling attention to these facts.

M.A.C.: 'The Next Step'

To the Editor:

The sudden and unexpected demand for the new $250 million issue of Municipal Assistance Corporation bonds is a most welcome indication that investor confidence in New York City is returning (news story Nov. 5). The city will now be able to repay the state loans it had received in order to avert financial disaster. The State of New York will be removed from the city's list of creditors.

The next and most logical step would seem to be the elimination of another group of creditors: those creditors who have been forced to bear the most onerous burden, i.e. the holders of $1 billion of short-term city notes past due and subject to the moratorium. Nothing short of full redemption of these notes should be tolerated. No further exchange offers for 8 percent M.A.C. bonds or the like can be justified in light of renewed investor interest. The original issues of M.A.C. bonds sold in the public markets were issued for the purpose of retiring short-term obligations at maturity and in full, in order to avoid default. Now that there is a new market for M.A.C. bonds bearing more than 10 percent interest, another exchange offer similar to the past two would be nothing less than a 15-to-20-percent devaluation of the note holder's investments.

To Protect Our Elderly

To the Editor:

As a geriatric social worker, I feel a strong concern over the current crime wave against the elderly and believe part of the counterattack should be directed against the manifestly inadequate criminal-justice system.

Finding ways to get senior citizens to report crime and feel secure against reprisal should be made a top priority. That means that social agencies supply transportation and escort service to the older victim for all court appearances. That also means the guarantee of anonymity in open court, with such data sealed in court records rather than handed over to the defendant who may be bent on vengeance.

Criminal-court judges must be monitored by the media and by civic organizations. Those who seldom sentence the assailants of older people should be held up to public scrutiny. Since the elderly comprise the largest age bloc of voters, retaliation at the polls would be the ideal sort of poetic justice.

Transkei: United Nations vs. the Xhosa

To the Editor:

The recent resolution in the U.N. condemning the independence of Transkei, voted on favorably 135 to 0 with only the United States abstaining, is yet another case of political shortsightedness and, worse, pandering by the more responsible elements of this body to those whose motives are often open to speculation.

The only justification put forward by the members of the U.N. for their retroactive action is that a recognition of Transkei as independent would amount to approval of South Africa's internal policies. The world seems to have forgotten one thing: nationalism. Long and viable have been the criticisms against apartheid development and the so-called "evils" perpetuated by this system. Yet it seems as if the U.N. would willingly push the Xhosa back into the arms they abhor.

Although the South African Government envisions eventual independence for its nine tribal homelands and follows a policy it feels is best suited to achieve this end, the decision to accept independence rests with the African tribes themselves. Some, such as Chief Gatsba Buthelezi of Kwa-Zulu, have refused to entertain the notion. This is the situation that invites concern and criticism from the world. Those are the Africans who merit re-evaluation by South Africans and non-South Africans alike. Ignoring a positive outgrowth of the difficult racial situation in southern Africa is irresponsible. Transkei made its decision as early as 1963. The Xhosa clearly wish to be independent. For once we are not being asked for handouts, nor are we being threatened with terrorism and friendship with Communism. We do have an African nation enduring peacefully and democratically.

Can recognition of the attempt by the Xhosa to retain their cultural identity and to assume with dignity their place in the U.N., for which they have worked long and hard and well, seriously be viewed as condoning the internal policies of the country they have left behind? Would a call for a little understanding and support really be remiss?

On Helping Lebanon

To the Editor:

I was infuriated when I read in The Times a few days ago that this Government plans to send hundreds of millions of dollars to Lebanon to help it rebuild. Why? Did we contribute to its destruction? Let the rich oil sheikhs rebuild Lebanon, as it was their Moslem brethren who took part in its destruction. And let the U.S.A. spend the money to rebuild our cities.

The New York Times/D. Corran

By NEIL AMDUR

When John Curry first approached Twyla Tharp about breaking the ice with him, it was almost worse than preparing for an Olympic final.

"I was a bit nervous about working with her," the world and Olympic figure-skating champion said yesterday, recalling his meeting with the queen of choreography. "I was afraid I wouldn't be able to do the routines well enough."

Miss Tharp, who has blazed revolutionary trails in ballet and modern dance, had never been on a pair of skates. "I was able to ask, 'Can you?'" she said, dramatizing their earliest discussions. "He said, 'Here's how.'"

While 140 skaters from 6 to 11 years old were gliding across the ice yesterday afternoon at a rink in Westwood, N.J., Mr. Curry and Miss Tharp were putting the polish on his routine at Madison Square Garden.

Figure skating finally has come of age in the United States. And with more skaters, rinks and clubs catering to the ambitious demands of recreation-minded Americans, the time may be right for something dramatic in the sport, such as carrying it one step beyond, into the realm of performing art. Enter Mr. Curry and Miss Tharp and Super-

The case was closed without the grand jury returning any indictments in the matter. [1:9:1.]

The Metropolitan Museum of Art announced a $20 million pledge from its trustee Walter Annenberg, former Ambassador to Britain, to establish a center to make the world's art more available to mass audiences. The center will be headed by Thomas Hoving, who is stepping down at the end of 1977 as director of the museum. [1:1-3.]

Heavier transit cutbacks are to be announced within 30 days by the Metropolitan Transportation Authority. So-called redundant services such as closely parallel-bus routes will be eliminated to close a $42 million budget gap next year, compared with cuts saving $20 million this year. [4:1-2.]

New York City's share of the statewide vote was only 32.6 percent last Tuesday, compared with 42.4 percent in 1960. The drop also exceeds the decline in the city's share of the population, now estimated at 41.6 percent compared with 46.1 percent in 1960. In contrast, the suburban counties of Nassau, Suffolk, Westchester and Rockland, with only 20.5 percent of the state's population, provided 23.2 percent of the vote. [3:3-4.]

Business/Finance

American Motors continued its sales slump, reporting a record loss of $51.1 million for the three months ended Sept. 30. The picture is grim for the country's smallest car maker because its Big Three rivals have been accumulating record profits this year. [6:5-6.]

Domestic copper prices, which many last summer were expecting to rise, have gone down instead this fall and remain around the 70-cent level. Today almost no one foresees any increase in the coming months, and there has been a major decrease in demand. [6:1-2:4.]

Stock prices tumbled again in mid-afternoon, with the Dow industrial average closing at 924.04, down 6.73 for the day. [6:1:2.] A heavy volume of new issues came to market as interest rates on state and city bonds rose. [6:2:5-6.] Soybean futures again led farm commodities upward with a gain of more than 10 cents a bushel. [6:2:4.]

Yesterday morning, two more elderly women were victimized, one in Flushing, the other in Bayside. Within an hour after the second attack, Police Officers Anthony Possidente and Ronald Olsen spotted the suspect and the car at the Metropolitan Avenue stake-out. The officers were in plainclothes and in an unmarked car, and the suspect pulled away with the officers in pursuit.

They chased the car about a half-mile, when the vehicle slammed into a tree. The suspect, uninjured, tried to flee on foot, but he was quickly overtaken and brought to the 105th Precinct station house.

Victims Make Identity

A number of the victims identified the man as their assailant. One of the last two victims was said to have had an uncashed Social Security check for $124 and the other a $1 bill.

The suspect, Bruce Edwards, 28, 406 East 85th Street in Brooklyn, was booked on charges of robbery, grand larceny of an automobile and possession of a dangerous weapon, a six-inch hunting knife.

In the Bronx, three youths were arrested on robbery charges when they sought to hold up a Transit Authority police officer posing as an elderly man on the platform of the IRT Freeman Street station. Fellow officers of the "victim," William McCaul, seized the three youths, two of whom are 16 and one 15. Transit Officers Arthur Schwartz and George Meskill said that one of the suspects had a loaded pistol.

Fugitive Is Indicted

A grand jury in the Bronx indicted Ronald E. Timmons, 19, who failed to show up for a hearing in Criminal Court last Wednesday. The fugitive had been freed in $500 bail. The judge who granted the bail was legally barred from knowing of Mr. Timmons' long record of juvenile violence, including a murder. The missing man and a co-defendant were charged with the robbery-beating of an 82-year-old woman in her apartment.

The co-defendant, Zachary Shannon, 22, whose $500 bail was raised to $15,000, was remanded by Justice Maurice Grey of State Supreme Court to Bellevue Hospital for mental observation until Dec. 13.

The indictments, announced by District Attorney Mario Merola of the Bronx, charged each defendant with first-degree robbery, punishable by up to 25 years' imprisonment, and two counts of second-degree robbery, two counts of second-degree burglary, assault in the second degree and illegal possession of a weapon

Corning Galloping Into Museum of West

By JUDITH CUMMINGS

Special to The New York Times

CORNING, N.Y., Nov. 10—Before Hollywood laid claim to it, the picture of the American West was conveyed to the rest of the country mostly by Eastern artists, such as Frederic Remington, who journeyed out to capture images that showed up in stereopticons and on the pages of Harper's Weekly.

Part of the legacy is being installed in this glass-company town, in the new Rockwell-Corning Museum, featuring a collection of Western art ranging from cowboy bravado to poignant portraits of the waning days of the American Indian.

Robert E. Rockwell, who made the museum possible, is the former owner of the local department store, and up until now he has kept much of the collection of Remingtons and Charles M. Russell and others of the Western school crammed right in the store—on walls, in corners and atop cabinets in the lingerie section.

Mr. Rockwell gave the collection to the town because, as he says, "right now, if you want to see a collection of great Western art, the nearest place is Tulsa, Oklahoma" and because he thinks "if kids can see it, they'll love it," as he did in his boyhood on a Colorado cattle ranch.

The museum will be opened to the public Saturday on a floor of the newly renovated Baron Steuben Hotel. The Corning Glass Works, enjoying a boom year after several years of slump, is underwriting the project and has pledged also to remodel the abandoned Victorian city hall as a permanent site for the museum, at a cost of about $2.5 million.

"Now, We've Got Hope"

Many here take the museum's opening as a sign of a budding revitalization of Corning, a town of 17,000 that depends on the glass company the way Hershey, Pa., depends on chocolate.

"If anything should happen to that glassworks, Lord help us," said Leonard Sparling, who has lived here 52 years and drives a Cadillac taxi up and down the highway between here and Elmira. "It's the only industry we got around here. Now, anyway, we've got hope."

A year ago, Corning laid off 500 workers in a major retrenchment. This year, it is reporting the highest sales in its history, allowing it, in the words of George Southworth, head of the company's historic preservation projects, "to take up Bob Rockwell's offer to give us his collection if we'd give him a museum to keep it in."

The entire Rockwell collection includes a 3,000-piece collection of Carder Steuben glass, antique toys and such Western items as firearms and Indian artifacts. These are eventually to go into the larger quarters at the old city hall.

In the meantime, visitors to the Western collection are met as they enter what used to be the hotel lobby by a blow-up of Edward Borein's "The Calgary Stampede," which resembles pandemonium on horseback and hides a movie projector shooting a continuous stream of Wild West films to the opposite wall.

"I paid $500 15 years ago for a signed Frederic Remington that turned out to be a fake, but I still keep it in my office because if I hadn't bought it I probably never would have started," the white-haired Mr. Rockwell said of the origins of his collection.

He had sent a photograph of the painting to Dr. Paul McCracken, then Thirteen more persons were indicted by a Federal grand jury in Newark on charges of using $1 million of a bank's funds for financing loan-shark and gambling operations. The defendants include Alexander T. Smith, 42 years old, of Ramsey, N.J., president of the State Bank of Chatham before it collapsed on April 4, and George Fiore, 45, of Chatham Township, N.J., and Anthony Malesse, 40, of Saddle River, N.J., former members of the bank's board of directors. The latest charges followed the indictment Tuesday of Robert L. ## 2 East Hampton Policemen Indicted

By IVER PETERSON

Special to The New York Times

RIVERHEAD, L. I., Nov. 10—Two members of the East Hampton Town police force were indicted by a grand jury here this morning, one of them for allegedly filing a "grudge" traffic ticket against a personal enemy and the other for allegedly having taken two impounded bicycles home to his children.

Officer Cited for Misdemeanor

Sgt. Charles Morici of Montauk was indicted on two counts—one charging first-degree perjury before the grand jury, a felony, and one charging "filing a false instrument" with the Town Court in the form of a traffic ticket against Edward Hegner of East Hampton that Mr. Hegner said he did not deserve.

"He was trying to get even with Hegner over a personal grudge," one of the investigators in the case said of Sergeant Morich following the indictments.

The other indictment handed up a Judge Joseph Fox in County Court here was against Samuel Mezynieski. Officer Mezynieski was cited for a misdemeanor for taking the impounded bicycles.

Thomas McVann, an assistant district attorney, told Judge Fox that the grand jury had voted two "reports" on individuals also involved in the two-month investigation into the conduct of the East Hampton police. Their names were not released. Sealed reports from grand juries usually involve criticism of people involved in the investigation for action that fall short of indictable offenses.

The grand jury also handed up three "no bills," meaning it had rejected three other charges against each or both of the indicted officers or against others involved in the investigation.

Jersey Company Is Fined $140 After Blast Injures Teen-Age

RAHWAY, N.J., Nov. 11 (AP)—A dent company whose teen-age employee was blinded and burned when his automobile carrying volatile liquid gas exploded has been fined $140 for violating state child labor laws.

A & C Dental Labs Inc. of Rahwa pleaded guilty yesterday in Municipal Court here to four charges filed by the State Department of Labor and Industry following an investigation.

John Ferdinand, now 18 years old, New Brunswick suffered internal injury and loss of his sight when a tank of acetylene liquid gas he was transporting exploded Oct. 21 in Clark, N.J. Mr. Ferdinand, who was 17 when he was hired by the company during the summer, is in fair condition at Rahway Hospital.

Yunich Calls for Reduced Service to Save $42 Million

By EDWARD C. BURKS

balancing next year's figures.

On Oct. 21, Mr. Yunich told a news conference that he would do all he could to avoid any further service cutbacks because more of them would have a devastating impact on the transit system. But he gave top priority to saving the 50-cent fare.

The most recent cuts, effective last Aug. 30, eliminated 215 daily subway train runs, bringing to 885 the number of runs dropped since early in 1975. The number of subway trains running daily has been cut from 8,200 in 1967 to 7,192 in March 1975 and to 6,337 as of Aug. 30.

At the budget hearing, Mr. Yunich said: "We do not have a revenue base with a built-in growth factor as would be provided by a dedicated broad-based tax to match the unavoidable normal rise in expenses."

He said that the transit-budget gap persisted despite operating savings of $100 million in 1976 because much of the Federal subsidy expected would not be available.

Mr. Yunich was referring to the complicated so-called "Beame shuffle" procedure, which provides Federal funds for operating purposes that have to be paid back a year later by the city and state.

Originally he had hoped to receive $125 million in "shuffle" money to balance the current year's budget without trouble, and $62.5 million for next year's budget. But the city and state want to phase out this type of borrowing to pay deficits.

Another Male Bastion Falls: '21' Hires a Waitress

By FRANK J. PRIAL

The "21" Club, repository of the old speakeasy tradition and bastion of boardroom macho, has bowed to legal pressure and hired its first waitress.

Jeanne King, 30 years old, a college graduate and a professional waitress for a dozen years, now is working part-time as an apprentice at "21." She is to begin waiting on tables two weeks from now.

The "21" Club is the first of eight restaurants to reach a settlement after having been sued last year over alleged discrimination against women. The suit against the other restaurants, a class action initiated by the American Civil Liberties Union, is still pending. Among those named in the complaint are Lutèce, La Côte Basque, the Four Seasons and La Caravelle.

As a result of the out-of-court settlement, "21" will hire Miss King and pay undisclosed fees to her as well as to the A.C.L.U. for legal fees.

Affirmative Action Promised

In addition, the restaurant has agreed to "engage in affirmative effort" to hire additional women as waiters and busboys, with the eventual goal being that women will comprise 50 percent of the dining-room staff. The restaurant also agreed to train women to become dining-room captains and to hire them in those positions when they become qualified.

"We have agreed to settle," said Sheldon Tannen, an executive of "21."

"We recognize that there should be equal opportunity for men and women. Just because we've been following a tradition in our business doesn't mean we've been right."

Mr. Tannen said "21" had traditionally hired European-trained people for its dining room staff because they considered service a profession—a profession undertaken with pride." Americans, he said, have usually looked on service as a stepping stone to something else. "We just don't want someone who takes a job as a waitress while she's waiting to become an actress," he said.

At the Four Seasons, Paul Kovi, co-owner, said: "We have hired one waitress and one page, and we are looking for more. I think that the problem is that most of the girls—ladies—don't realize that the jobs are there and they don't come around. We have never discriminated. If you 40 women is trying for jobs but that most of them could not qualify. 'They think of it in terms of a cocktail lounge,' he said.

Union Also Named

Also named in the A.C.L.U. complaint was Local 1 of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers Union. Jordan Pola, secretary-treasurer of the local, said yesterday that the union had no control over restaurant hiring.

"They must try the New York State Employment Service when they want to hire someone," Mr. Pola said. "If their requirements there, they can hire wherever they want. Our contract says only that the new employee must join the union in 30 days."

Spokesmen for Lutèce, La Caravelle, La Côte Basque and Le Manoir, all mentioned in the complaint, declined to comment. Bob Willis, the general manager of Maxwell's Plum, said: "We don't discriminate. We have women working as waitresses now."

Kathleen Peratis, a lawyer for the A.C.L.U. who filed the original charges of discrimination, praised "21" for agreeing to hire Miss King. Of the remaining restaurants, she said: "They're just being stupid. But they're beginning to realize they'd better settle because they're damn well going to lose."

Noted Philadelphia Hotel Closing, Casualty of 'Legionnaires' Disease'

Philadelphia's convention business from near-by Atlantic City, where casino gambling, a new attraction in the East, was authorized by New Jersey voters in a referendum last week. Eugene C. Hosmer, director of the Convention and Visitors Bureau, said today that 30 of the 50 conventions scheduled at the Bellevue from Sept. 1 to Dec. 31 had been canceled. The Bellevue still has seven years of future convention bookings that must be re-assigned.

Mayor Rizzo said in a statement read at the hotel news conference that the city had entered into negotiations with the Bankers Security Corporation, the real estate holding company that owns the Bellevue, the Benjamin Franklin Hotel and a Hilton franchise here, to buy the $15 million Bellevue property and some adjacent land. The city would raze the hotel and offer the site to a developer, who would build a new 1,000-room hotel with convention facilities for 2,500 to 3,000 persons, more than twice the Bellevue's capacity.

This plan, coming from a municipal government already in deep financial difficulty, remained in doubt, however, and some opposition to the razing plans—perhaps a lawsuit—was expected from historical and preservation groups.

One prominent banker said what the Bellevue's location, at South Broad and Walnut Streets, was "not ideal" for what would be the city's largest hotel. Plans for at least three other new hotels here have been "in progress" for several years, so far without the financial commitment to build them.

At the State Capitol in Harrisburg, Gov. Milton J. Shapp, who has used the Bellevue as his "temporary executive office" when in Philadelphia and who made a publicized stay there recently in an attempt to offset the publicity about the epidemic, called the Bellevue equal to New York's Waldorf-Astoria in "elegance and the certain distinction bestowed upon it by the many fascinating people who have stayed there."

"We are losing an institution and a landmark," he said. But noting that the state government has given financial aid to convention facilities in Pittsburgh and Erie, the Governor refrained from promising such aid to Philadelphia.

of the Bellevue's closing on Nov. 15, a week from tomorrow, will fall on the hotel's 500-odd remaining employees, many of whom have worked nowhere else. Persons who attended a hotel staff meeting this morning at which the closing announcement was made by William G. Chadwick, the resident vice president, said that bellmen, bartenders, waiters and waitresses cried.

James Clark, head of the Hotel, Restaurant Employees and Bartenders Union here, which represents 335 Bellevue workers, said, "My people are just very, very sorrowful, very disturbed." Mr. Clark said that the union was considering a lawsuit: "to force them to stay open" for the two years remaining in a year-old labor contract.

Bellevue executives said that some will receive no severance pay. Mr. Clark said, but many will be paid for vacation time in cash and others will be eligible for retirement benefits.

The closing is expected to have little impact on the American Medical Association, which dedicated to go ahead and hold its national convention here next month after considering a shift to another city. Few of the association's 7,000 delegates decided to book rooms at the Bellevue Stratford.

On Monday the American Lung Association will hold a one-day scientific symposium at the hotel. The subject is: "Legionnaires' Disease." No one has yet fixed the cause of the outbreak—whether it was a bacterial or, as some theories suggest, a toxic chemical agent introduced either accidentally or deliberately.

And, meanwhile, another statistic was disclosed today: a business loss at the Bellevue averaging $10,000 a day. Today, on the 100th day since the Legion story began to unfold last August, the figure hit $1 million.

Rep. Murphy Plans Hearings
 PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10 (AP)—Representative John M. Murphy, Democrat of Staten Island and lower Manhattan, chairman of the House Subcommittee on Consumer Protection, said today that he will hold two-day hearings this month on possible causes of "legionnaires' disease." The hearings will be held Nov. 23 and Nov. 24 and will include Dr. William Sunderman Jr. of the University of Connecticut, Governor Shapp and Mayor Rizzo.

It Was a Dance All Right, but Few Danced

By ENID NEMY

Carly Simon was teetering on the brink of having a baby, so she didn't dance. Mary Beame had an ingrown toenail, so she didn't dance. Mica Ertegun and Chessy Rayner had to get back to their decorating business, so they didn't dance.

Jean Taller said no one asked her, so she didn't dance. As a matter of fact, almost no one danced at the midi dansant held yesterday in the yellow and white striped tent on the lawn of Gracie Mansion. But there was a groaning buffet table and well-stocked bar, Peter Duchin's music, and a lot of people who get around to a lot of things. There were also a lot of photographers and reporters, maybe one for each guest, which put the seal of approval on everything for the lot of the people who get around to a lot of things.

The Brothers Bee Gee

There were, too, three fairly young men from Britain named Robin, Barry and Maurice Gibb, brothers who are known as the Bee Gees and are a major recording group. They are giving a concert on Dec. 2 at Madison Square Garden and the net proceeds, which could be anywhere between $10,000 and $35,000, will be donated to the Police Athletic League.

Robert Stigwood, the Bee Gees' manager, said he hoped his would set a precedent, so that other foreign groups performing in this country would leave behind some of the earnings. Mayor Beame nodded his head approvingly and made a joke about not wanting anyone to think that because of the city's past financial difficulties, the Mayor was now living in a tent.

Fat Buckley swept in for about 4½ minutes and towered over almost everyone at the noonday dance party, but the fox-and-orchid-decorated Apollonia Von Ravenstein, a pretty, tall model, and said she thought New York should have more such parties.

Some Other Celebrities

Andy Warhol, in a sheepskin-lined coat, Paulette Goddard, in a fluffy white fur coat and diamonds, Sylvia Miles in a gold star neck chain outlined with the word "Super," Nan Kempner in her newest Saint Laurent outfit and Jean Taller in her newest Adolfo outfit, hove into view.

"It's a nice community party," Mrs. Buckley said, without even sticking tongue in cheek.

Most of the other tongues around were busy explaining that the city wasn't paying a cent for the party (it was being given by Mr. Stigwood) and lapping up the beef Wellington, hot smoked salmon, pâté and lobster mousse on the buffet tables.

The latter sight was watched with considerable joy by Peter Aschkenasy, who owns the United States Steakhouse and Charley O's and who catered the lunch. His chef, carrying all the food, had been arrested on the way to Gracie Mansion, for driving without a license. The food had arrived scarcely 30 minutes before the guests.

Tower Was a Casualty

"We lost the ice sculpture of the Tower of London," Mr. Aschkenasy said, a little sadly. But the Statue of Liberty sculpture survived, the torch a bit wobbly but aloft.

By midafternoon, when the party broke up, all the "Gracie Mansion" matches had disappeared, as had the green-and-white clad schoolgirls from the Police Athletic League Drum and Bugle Corp of the 120th Precinct in Staten Island.

But Joanne Newcomb and Nancy Kim, 14-year-old schoolgirls from Queens, were still out in the driveway "freezing to death." They had been standing around since 9 A.M., had seen the Bee Gees on their way in, but were hoping for another glimpse.

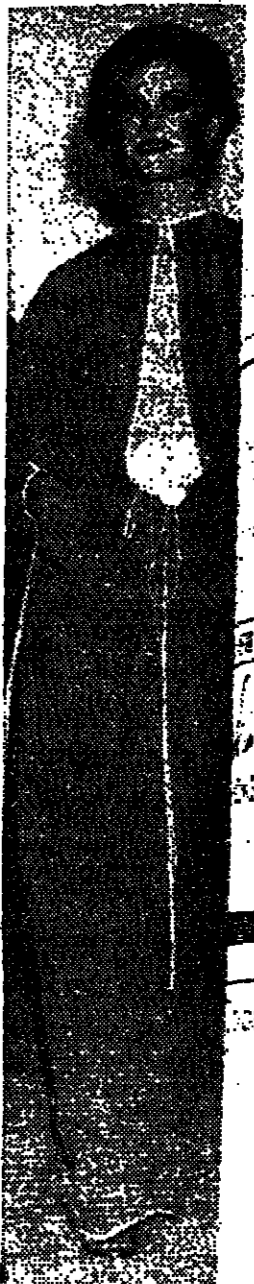

"Well anyway, Barry shook my hand," Nancy said. "My God!"

Beene Deliver Style '77 But Qui

By BERNADINE MORRIS

Thousands of fashions destined to be worn next spring are being paraded on Seventh Avenue this week. Many of them are commercial, which in current fashion parlance means they are familiar enough to be easily understandable and flattering enough to most bodies so that women will buy them. Some of them are pretty. Few have style.

Style? Like elegance, it's a word that through infrequency of use has almost lost its meaning.

To work out a current definition, watch for Geoffrey Beene's clothes—they're full of style, whether they're fishnet tops over shorts or fluid, pale silk crepe dresses with a line of color drawn down the front or maybe across the shoulders.

What is astonishing about this is that it's accomplished in a thoroughly modern idiom. Style is, after all, a rather old-fashioned virtue. The 1930's were replete with it. It faded, understandably, in the 1940's, surfaced in the next decade, and disappeared, it would seem forever, in the 1960's.

Fishnet Tops

Well, Mr. Beene has brought it back into fashion, as he demonstrated in his show yesterday—adapting it to the vicissitudes of modern living. What's more, he's made it unpretentious. This is no time for clothes that demand attention, for clothes that overwhelm the viewer, as well as you might say, the wearer. Those fishnet tops, for example, look as if they were made of burlap. They're not. They're a very fine quality, soft Italian cotton. Unassuming, of course, but very chic.

The evening dresses in crepe de chine are another example. A lot of designers are playing crepe de chine. Few have tried on such minimal ever. In these, the fabric flows, with just a suggestion, seemingly, from it makes all the difference.

Between the shortening dresses, there are thoughts. Loose tunic pants, for instance. Aers have turned away. Mr. Beene hasn't, per a couple of seasons, a out a flowing kind of not look mannish at for day or night, the pa by loose shirts or jac tribute to the supple qu

Idaho's Governor Juggles a Hot Potato—Coolly

By LAWRENCE VAN GELDER

There's the Children's Aid Society. And the A.S.P.C.A. And NOW. They protect children, animals and women against their abusers and detractors. Cecil D. Andrus protects potatoes.

"I'm here to sell spuds," he said yesterday at the Pierre Hotel. "There isn't any doubt about it."

Mr. Andrus thinks potatoes are malign. People associate them with fat and ban them from diets.

"They say it's starchy," he said of the potato, "and if you're on a diet stay away from it."

Not so, argues Mr. Andrus. The typical Idaho baking potato, tipping the scales at 8 to 10 ounces, he maintained, has only 120 calories and is rich in protein.

Where people upset things, he points out, is with the butter dish and the sour cream container. Mr. Andrus says a good baked potato with only salt and pepper is a filling meal.

Sustained Life

As for those who fuss about the carbohydrate content, Mr. Andrus says he isn't about to engage in debate all the way down the nutritional line. There are people in the third world, he says, who have sustained life for extended periods on potatoes alone.

Who is Mr. Andrus?

He's the Governor of Idaho, a state with an eight-billion-pound potato crop this year, up 10 percent from last.

It's worth $550 million dollars or one third of the state's gross agricultural product.

And the Idaho potato industry employs at least 17 percent of the state's population of $20,000.

The 45-year-old Governor, who was elected in 1970 and was re-elected in 1974, doesn't necessarily defend all potatoes. It's really the Idaho russets he backs. Other potatoes, he says, are sometimes watery and soggy.

"The Idaho russet is far superior," he says proudly. Its virtues he attributes to the state's elevation, which makes for warm days and cool nights; its volcanic soil and its pure clear water supply.

Holding Steady

As for Americans in general, the Governor, a Democrat, said they are consuming about 120 to 125 pounds of potatoes a year. And the rate, he said, seems to be holding steady.

But the detractors who say potatoes are fattening are still out there. Add eternal vigilance to the price of a potato.

Gov. Cecil D. Andrus of Idaho and Eugene Frankowski, executive chef at the Pierre, check over some Idahos.

LONDON, Nov. 9 (Reuters)—Umberto Berlen, a 39-year-old waiter, complained today that he was dismissed from his job at a London nightclub because he served wine over a diner's left shoulder instead of his right.

Mr. Berlen said that another reason for being asked to leave his job at Les Ambassadeurs Club, whose members include Prince Charles, was because he smelled of garlic. "I had eaten some garlic, it is true, the night before, but it was to help cure a bad cold I had," he told reporters.

Mr. Berlen also acknowledged that he had served the wine, a magnum of red bordeaux, from the wrong side. "But there was no room to go round the table because there was a column in the way," he said.

The club's secretary, Robert Mills, commented: "I will not have anybody who lowers the standard of my club, which we have worked for years to put at the top."

Mr. Berlen said that he had applied to an industrial court to get his job back on the grounds of unfair dismissal.

Audience spotted Geoffrey Beene slip room and wasted no time congratulating him.

enberg will also provide the assumed operating expenses for whose facilities will include the staff, professors and student rooms, a 500-seat theater, editing and cutting rooms. Access will be available from a garage and from a Central office, permitting the scheduling of other events when the museum is closed.

ary discussions" with the Louvre and the Russian Ministry of Culture about the possibility of such a venture, he said. As another example, he noted that discussions were being held with the Public Broadcasting Service for the Met to provide "a great film series on the entire story of Pompeii and Herculaneum," the art-rich Roman cities destroyed by the eruption of Mount Vesuvius in A.D. 79.

"And," he added, "we could do a film about one of the great museological problems, the conservation of paintings, made for circulation to smaller museums lacking a conservation department."

He noted that the Metropolitan had had such an educational project as the center in mind for some years, and that in 1970, on the museum's centennial, it commissioned a report, "The Museum and Modern Communications."

The Entire World

"We were very keen to do something, but it came down to funding," he said. When Mr. Annenberg joined the board in 1974, Mr. Hoving showed him a film of the designer Charles Eames's project for a Central Guide to the Collection and Orientation Hall at the Met, showing not only what the museum had but what it lacked.

"Mr. Annenberg said we should go further than this," he said, "that we should have a center that would reach out to the entire world, bring to the museum what we didn't have and then go out to many, many segments of the public." The publisher felt that the Metropolitan would be a suitable location for such a center, Mr. Hoving added, because of the span of its collections, its worldwide contacts and entrees to most other countries of the world, and its resources other than works of art, such as slides, photographs and archival material.

The new project, to be called the Fine Arts Center of the Annenberg School of Communications at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, will have an independent board of trustees, four of whom will be nominated by the Annenberg School of Communications and four by the museum, to which Mr. Hoving will report when he assumes his new post. He will thus, he said, be "completely divorced" from the running of the museum.

A search committee will be appointed by trustees to find a new director for the museum.

The initial planning team for the new Fine Arts Center will consist of Mr. Hoving, the office of Charles and Ray Eames, Peter Goldmark, communications consultant, and Kevin Roche/John Dinkeloo and Associates, the museum's architects.

Sex Talk Parlor Loses Licenses

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Nov. 10 (UPI)—The city commission yesterday revoked the license of Madames, described as a sex talk parlor that the commission claimed defrauded male tourists by promising sex but not delivering. An unidentified California visitor said that advertising had lured him to the place. He thought he would get sex but instead found bikini-clad girls reading from sexy books.

Guards Find Tunnel, Thwart Prison Escape

SAN QUENTIN, Calif., Nov. 10 (UPI)—Inmates at San Quentin Prison removed and concealed 260 cubic yards of rock, shale and dirt to dig an elaborate tunnel in an unsuccessful mass escape attempt.

Six inmates were held in maximum custody today, and investigators believed that many other inmates were involved. The tunnel was discovered yesterday after the authorities received rumors of plans for a "big breakout."

The tunnel, two and a half by four feet, ran 10 feet down from the north cellblock, housing 400 men, and 67 feet horizontally past the gas chamber. It had 55 feet to go to get underneath the wall and emerge at a sheltered point near San Francisco Bay, from where it would have been an easy walk to freedom.

Rock and dirt were moved in a box sled for distribution under the sub-floor of the north cellblock, an area where guards never went. The diggers probably had four hours a day to work.

An extraordinary work that can help you solve your child's physiological problems before they become emotional ones. Research has determined that unruliness, bedwetting, allergies, school failure, nightmares — can be linked to the inability of the brain to handle stress. Dr. Lendon Smith shows how diet, vitamins, and prompt treatment can conquer these ills before they take root.

"Your child often acts rotten because he feels rotten...allergies, nervous symptoms, insomnia, migraine symptoms, and hyperactivity are linked to enzyme-chemical dysfunctions. You must add the nutrients to activate the enzymes or supply the missing chemicals."

Notes on People

Vera Zorina, the former prima ballerina, has been appointed general director and artistic administrator of the Norwegian Opera in Oslo. Miss Zorina, who was born in Germany of Norwegian parents, has been an American citizen since 1943, but she has been active in Norwegian cultural affairs for many years. In her new post, which she assumes next August, Miss Zorina succeeds Gunnar Brannø. One of her predecessors was Kirsten Flagstad, the late Wagnerian soprano. After Miss Zorina retired from an active role in ballet some years ago, she turned to directing plays, television films and operas. At the New York City Opera she has staged "I Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria Rusticana," and she has directed five productions for the Santa Fe Opera Company.

Mary Keefe, a 48-year-old lieutenant in the Police Department who had been serving as commanding officer of the Sex Crimes Analysis Unit, has resigned and joined the University Research Corporation in Chevy Chase, Md. Under a two-year grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, Mrs. Keefe hopes to develop a training program, national in scope, to teach high-ranking personnel in police departments, hospitals, prosecutors' offices and women's groups the benefits of coordinating services to aid rape victims. Mrs. O'Keefe's replacement in the Sex Crime Analysis Unit is Sgt. Gladys Polk, who, like her predecessor, joined the Police Department 25 years ago.

Washington will not be cheering Groucho Marx this week after all. At the last minute, the 86-year-old comedian canceled his Tuesday night trip to the capital, where he was to receive several honors, because his secretary-companion, Erin Fleming, is ill with the flu in Los Angeles. He will not go anywhere without her. So the 365 holders of $6 tickets to a sold-out film performance, featuring Groucho in person at the Smithsonian Institution last night had to be given their money back, and Public Citizen, the Ralph Nader consumer group, had to cancel a benefit tribute to Groucho tonight and refund some $12,000 to contributors.

The reason Ian Mitchell, a member of the Bay City Rollers, Britain's most popular rock group, has withdrawn from the group is simple. "My sanity was at stake," he explained. "I want to have the chance to walk out on the streets or go to the movies without being mobbed. It was enough to drive you insane." Mr. Mitchell's predecessor in the Bay City Rollers, Alan Longmuir, also quit because of the pressures of fending off frenzied teenyboppers.

Benjamin Coates, a member of an old New York family active in shipping and real estate, yesterday paid a record $180,000 for a complete set of the 56 autographs of signers of the Declaration of Independence. The set, owned by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania since 1881, was auctioned

Susan Brown, Decorator, Married to Martin Baker

Susan K. Brown, an interior decorator, was married last evening to Martin B. Baker, a lawyer with Rosemann Collins Freund Lewis & Cohen law firm. Rabbi Burt A. Siegel performed the ceremony in the home in Riverdale, the Bronx, of the bridegroom's mother, Elizabeth Baker.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard K. Kaufmann of New York. Her father is a senior partner in Kaufmann, Alberg & Company, brokers. He is a member emeritus of the Cornell University Council and a member of the advisory council of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Mr. Baker is the son also of the late Robert C. Baker, a textile manufacturer.

The bride, an alumna of the Dalton Schools, also attended Cornell. She is a student at the Columbia University School of General Studies. Her husband graduated from the Riverdale Country School, Cornell and the American University School of Law.

Mr. Baker is the son also of the late Robert C. Baker, a textile manufacturer by a Philadelphia concern, to defray the historical society's deficit. Because the set of autographs contains 48 full letters of signers of the declaration, it is considered finer than the set that brought the previous record price of $120,000 last year. Mr. Coates, in confirming his purchase, had a good word for rival bidders. "These were the most intelligent and interesting people who ever gathered together to solve a problem," he said.

One of the stars of the 29-29 tie game played by Harvard and Yale in 1963 was Tommy Lee Jones, a six-footer from Texas who made All- Ivy League as an offensive guard and graduated cum laude from Harvard in 1969. Mr. Jones considered himself "100 little" to play professional football, and sought a career instead as an actor. He was successful both on and off Broadway, winning particularly high praise for his portrayal of Stephen Dedalus in James Joyce's "Ulysses in Nighttown" in 1974. The 30-year-old actor has been seen in several movies and television shows, but is expected to reach star status with his newest assignment. He has just been chosen to play Howard R. Hughes in a four-hour made-for-TV movie biography that will be seen on CBS early next year.

Thomas A. Edison, Guglielmo Marconi, Orville Wright, and Albert Einstein were all winners of the Franklin Medal, the highest award of the internationally prestigious Franklin Institute of Philadelphia. Yesterday, the name of Dr. Mahlon B. Hoogland was his contributions to the knowledge of added to the list. He was honored for his contributions to the knowledge of how proteins are produced and their relation to the information coded in DNA and RNA. DNA is the genetic molecule that governs each person's inherited characteristics, while RNA molecules are involved in the biochemical process by which these characteristics are reproduced. Dr. Hoogland is president and scientific director of the Worcester Foundation for Experimental Biology, in Shrewsbury, Mass.

Carroll O'Connor, who plays Archie Bunker on television, has always pointed out that he's nowhere near as bluntnosed as Bunker. But he drew the line after Swank magazine, which is devoted largely to nude female layouts, published what was considered an unauthorized and fabricated interview with him. He sued, and yesterday, in State Supreme Court in Manhattan, Mr. O'Connor won a $500,000 judgment against Swank and its publishers. The court agreed that the interview was, as Mr. O'Connor complained, "concocted" without his permission. Mr. O'Connor had also contended that he was "greatly distressed by the willful, unilateral misuse of [his] national prestige to promote a lurid magazine."

The "final notice" to Antoinette Ignagni, of Niagara Falls, Ont., was to the point. Unless she paid her electric bill by yesterday, said the notice from the Niagara Falls Hydro Commission, electric service to her home would be cut off. And so, properly frightened, Mrs. Ignagni went straight down to a bank and paid the power commission the penny she owed it.

Meany Opposes Wage-Price Curb; Is Silent on Demands on

By EDWARD COWAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 — George Meany, organized labor's chief spokesman, expressed strong opposition today to any reintroduction of wage-price guidelines, but said that labor would be willing to discuss wage-price restraint with business under White House auspices.

Otherwise, Mr. Meany refused at a news conference to be drawn out on what labor would expect from President-elect Jimmy Carter or what the unions would press for first.

Although he stressed the importance of stimulating the economy and creating jobs, Mr. Meany refused to say whether he thought a tax cut was necessary.

The 82-year-old president of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organization met with reporters after a meeting of the federation's 33-member Executive Council. Mr. Meany brushed off questions about when he would retire but said again, as he has in recent weeks following a recurrence of pulmonary trouble, "I've been thinking about it."

A Probable Successor
Lane Kirkland, secretary treasurer, is considered almost certain to succeed Mr. Meany.

Mr. Meany spoke warmly of John T. Dunlop as a possible Secretary of Labor in the new administration but insisted that there were others—whom he declined to identify—who would also be acceptable. Mr. Dunlop held that post for 10 months under President Ford and returned to Harvard University last January after Mr. Ford, contrary to Mr. Dunlop's expectations, vetoed a bill to broaden labor's right to picket at construction sites.

Mr. Dunlop accepted the post in 1975 only after ascertaining that he would be among the President's senior economic advisers. Presumably, he would seek the same assurance from Mr. Carter.

Mr. Meany was almost diffident on the contribution of the federation's 109 affiliated unions to the victory of Mr. Carter and other Democrats. He repeatedly insisted on sharing credit with black voters and other minorities.

In labor circles, it was said that Mr. Meany called the executive council into session on short notice to recommend just such modesty in asserting labor's claims on the new administration. Mr. Meany was understood to take the view that labor could get more from a Carter administration if it did not demand too much too soon.

Mr. Meany told the reporters that "the only commitment" made to him by Mr. Carter in their several face-to-face and telephone talks this year was that "many problems we have will give them immediate consideration."

Repeatedly, Mr. Meany deferred questions of policy and legislation until the Executive Council's regular February meeting in Miami Beach. By then, Mr. Meany and Mr. Carter are expected to have a better idea of the new administration's policies and priorities, subjects on which almost nothing specific is known now.

When Mr. Meany was asked about wage-price "guidelines," he was cool and emphatic. "I don't know just what you mean by voluntary wage and price controls," he said. "We're very, very wary of wage or price controls."

Wage-Price Limits
"Guidelines" usually means White House recommendations for limits on increases that lack the force of law. "Controls" usually means mandatory limits. Mr. Meany's use of the two words synonymously was said by those who know him to reflect his view of an important difference.

Asked how he would Carter invited business White House meeting to tary wage-price restraint sponded, "We will be the labor had participated in the last four Presidents."

While refusing to be candidates for Secretary Meany did respond to a Mr. Dunlop by saying "I contribution over there. I another point he said, "outstanding."

As for the suitability o cock, president of the U Workers, for a Cabinet said, "Leonard would cer a Cabinet post."

Mr. Meany may have that he is thinking abo Asked what role he ex the Carter administrat "Elder statesman."

Ionesco Tingles Despair With Humor

By JOHN L. HESS

Eugene Ionesco, the Academician of the Absurd, arrived in town from Paris the other day to attend the American premiere of "La Vase" (Ooze), a film in which he makes his debut as a star, and to give his admirers and critics an odd dose of his own brand of humorous despair.

Six hundred admirers of the author of such plays as "Rhinoceros," "The Bald Soprano" and "The Lesson" were assembled by the Maison Francaise at the Washington Square campus of New York University on Tuesday night for a panel interview. The playwright, a bald baritone in broad-brimmed brown corduroy, commanded the discussion in French and in an endless play of heavy-lidded grimaces, now resembling a malicious elf, now a Chinese sage.

Invention of Critics
The word avant-garde is not of much use, he contended, since you cannot tell whether a movement is avant-garde until afterward. The phrase "Theater of the Absurd" was a critic's invention.

"The word that suits me is Theater of Despair. For me, it was an attempt to remove all meaning from every word, every gesture. The despair was real, the absurd was real, the meaningless was real."

"All that is new doesn't have value, but to be new is a condition of value. . . . [The artist] tries in a craftsmanlike fashion to explore the forest of the world. He must write as if he were alone in the world. He rejects everything.

"If there is a contradiction in what I say, why not? After all, there are Hegelians of the Left, and Hegelians of the Right. It's a good thing that one contradicts oneself, else one would go mad."

To the question, "Why write for tomorrow, when tomorrow lasts only 24 hours?" Mr. Ionesco answered, "Give me 24 hours to reply."

Asked to discuss why his earlier plays are still occasionally performed, while his recent ones, like "Macbett," a new version of Shakespeare's tragedy, have not been well received, he said: "I write rather to outrage the critics. If I had continued to write 'The Bald Soprano' and 'The Lesson,' imagine what they would have written. I did not, and you can see what they did write."

Writes to Outrage the Critics

For an elderly artist, the playwright observed, it is a bit depressing to be praised for his early work. "This said, 'The Bald Soprano' may be my best work to date."

"I live in a state of permanent depression."

He squinted and smiled. Mr. Ionesco is not only the star of "La Vase," but also its author. The film, which was directed by Heinz Von Cramer, is to have only one showing here—Monday night at midnight at the Art Theater on Eighth Street east of Fifth Avenue.

The film's French dialogue will be accompanied by a voice-over English translation.

The Cast

THE NEXT MAN, directed by Richard C. Sarafian, stars David M. Wolf and Nicole Scott. The film, based on the novel by Michael Crichton, is a suspense thriller about a man who is put into a helicopter to go sight-seeing. "The Next Man" is the first film I've ever seen that is so acutely bored with itself that it tries to go away.

'Next Man' Plays on Paranoia

By VINCENT CANBY

"The Next Man," which opened at the Rivoli and other theaters yesterday, is a suspense melodrama made by people whose talent for filmmaking and knowledge of international affairs would both fit comfortably into the left nostril of a small bee.

It's about a visionary Saudi Arabian minister of state named Khalil. A blond, played by the very Scots-sounding Sean Connery, who proposes to defuse the Middle East by signing a mutual assistance pact with Israel and by making petroleum and petroleum by-products available virtually at cost to poor nations.

"The Next Man" is the story of the attempt by various vested interests in this country, the Soviet Union and the Middle East, acting separately, to put an end to this dreadful scheme by putting an end to Khalil.

Like a lot of other films these days, "The Next Man" is obsessed with political assassination but it never really identifies its villains, preferring, instead, to cop out by playing on national paranoia—the assumption that everyone everywhere is on the take from someone somewhere. This attitude is too easy to represent true cynicism. It's simple laziness.

In "The Next Man" the forces of reaction are represented entirely by a mysterious, exceedingly well-dressed young man named Nicole Scott, said to be the daughter of a former American ambassador to Great Britain, a Bryn Mawr graduate, and a girl who apparently says not for pay but for thrills of a sort you don't get in the Junior League.

This character is played by Cornelia Sharpe, a new actress who is well on her way to becoming the actress producer will hire when they can't get Faye Dunaway. Miss Sharpe is stunning looking and model-skinny, and you don't for a minute believe her to be an international assassin any more than you believe Mr. Connery to be an Arab anything.

The movie appears to agree. As if to take our minds off such matters, "The Next Man" moves restlessly around the world like a fretful tourist, from New York to the Middle East, the south of France, London, Ireland, Bavaria, and the Bahamas, though nothing much happens in any one of these places that couldn't as easily happen somewhere else.

Muti Leads the Philadelphians

By ALLEN HUGHES

Because Riccardo Muti has been appointed principal guest conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra for next season and must, therefore, be regarded as a leading candidate to succeed Eugene Ormandy as its music director, the Italian maestro's appearance with the orchestra at Carnegie Hall on Tuesday night was of more than passing interest.

Was there anything to be learned from his work on Tuesday evening to indicate what qualities he might bring to the orchestra if he became music director?

After hearing this program of Stravinsky's "Norwegian Moods," Mozart's Symphony No. 25 in G minor and the Symphonic Excerpts from Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet," the answer is "Not much of significance."

Mr. Muti, who made his American debut with the Philadelphia in 1972, conducted them in three New York concerts before this one and was praised for his accomplishments each time.

There was much to admire on Tuesday night, too. He shaped the phrases of the Mozart symphony lovingly and allowed no note to be played meaninglessly. Furthermore, the tone was lovely throughout.

But the interpretation was not consistent stylistically. At times, it seemed quite 18th-century in spirit, but then Mr. Muti would cross a phrase in such a way as to let you know that silken symphonic effect was really what he cared about most. In short, it was precise, beautiful and not quite right.

Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet" music should have proven to be an ideal vehicle for him, but it fell somewhat short of that. This, surely, is a young man's music, and Mr. Muti is, after all, only 35 years old. But it is also music of slight substance and shaky structure, and it demands a conductor to keep it all whirling and surging so dazzlingly and beguilingly that the listener's attention is never diverted from glittering surface.

Mr. Muti is skillful, but he is not yet a magician able to mesmerize an audience with successions of effects that last as long as Berlioz's in this instance. And, indeed, when it came to the one surefire piece of the group, the "Queen Mab" Scherzo, Mr. Muti came close to seeming dull with it. No conductor should have to stand or fall on the basis of what he does with Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet," however, nor upon his way with Stravinsky's charming but minor "Norwegian Moods."

This listener would say of Mr. Muti that he seems to be a gifted young man who is still in the process of discovering and shaping his artistic personality. If this concert proved to be something less than satisfying, it was as much the result of poor judgment in programming as of anything else. Such things are not fatal.

and paradox, is trying to pose problems of good and evil. He determines that, forshadowing Brecht perhaps, "the greatest sin is poverty." Barbara is a rich Salvation Army lass intent on saving souls. Hero father, Undershaft, is a munitions manufacturer intent on his own material good, and so far as it affects him, the material good of his workers. He is an unrepentant capitalist, while his daughter is an unthinking socialist. The argument is not that well balanced, yet it is entertaining.

Fine 'Major Barbara,' for the Love of Shaw

By CLIVE BARNES

PRINCETON, N.J.—Over the last few years the McCarter Theater, with its peculiarly symbiotic relationship with Princeton University, has become one of the best resident theaters in the country. This has been due to men such as Lou Criss, Dan Selzer and, nowadays, its current producing director, Michael Kahn. It not only offers a generally good repertory, but it also has an unusually high level of production values.

Take as a very good example the current staging of Shaw's "Major Barbara." Directed by Kenneth Frankel and with Maria Tucci as Barbara, William Seward as her Machiavellian father and Robert Stattel as her Greek professor lover, this is just about as good a "Major Barbara" as you could fairly expect anywhere.

By now I have a small and nigardly reputation as an anti-Shawian, which is unfair. I love Shaw—I simply do not love Shaw as much as his perferid admirers love Shaw, and I also think he lacks true passion and would do almost anything for a laugh. Yet this, I submit, is putting Shaw in perspective, not at all dismissing him. A play such as "Major Barbara," despite a certain dramatic lack of focus—there is no clearly marked protagonist—remains a diabolically clever comedy.

People take Shaw so seriously that it is sometimes easy to forget how funny he can be. In part he is in the comic tradition of Ben Jonsson, portraying his comic characters in the caricatured fashion of his plays is usually faultless. In "Major Barbara," Shaw, with his customary love of dialectic him. For some reason he has transposed the play's date from 1906 to 1913—to suggest Britain on the eve of war perhaps—but even such a transposition does not quite justify a show-cooled dinner jacket or a copy of the Times of London, which is clearly a contemporary motif. But I am joking for the production as a whole did have a very affectionate feel for Shaw's life and times.

Majorie Kellogg has devised some pleasantly ingenious settings, and the costumes—ana-chronistic show-collars apart—by Carrie F. Robbins are pleasantly stylish.

The performance of the evening undoubtedly comes from Maria Tucci as Barbara. It is a difficult role because it can be played as part simoleon, part monster. Miss Tucci played it absolutely as if the lines had been written by Ibsen—which is probably what Shaw prayed for in the first place. She is the modern, sensible, essentially humane, and genially heartless, woman.

Patricia Falkenhain is beautifully acerbic as Lady Britomart, which is, by the way, possibly the play's best role, a characterization worthy of Wilde or Coward. Mr. Stattel has fun with the drum-banging, Dionysiac Greek professor, and Mr. Seward exudes urbane wickedness and uncommon common sense as the munitions tycoon. I also liked Christopher Gaze as the silent child, son who never is mentioned, but the whole cast was exceptionally shipshape and neat.

Once in a while you go to the theater expecting not too much, and you find yourself pleasantly surprised. A few more productions like this "Major Barbara" and I will find myself in the trenches defending Shaw against the infidel-

Recital: Obratzsova's Passion

An Uninhibited Voice That's Big and Brilliant, Miss Obratzsova Offers the First Recital in New Fisher Hall

Her face covered with a hand. The gestures seemed so natural and unaffected that they were not embarrassing. When she came to Dalila's arias, her body took on a regal stance with what seemed like instinct.

The voice was many things, big and brilliant at the top, grainy in the middle, solid in the lowest register. It could be meltingly soft. As Miss Obratzsova threw herself passionately into the music, it was almost possible to overlook the vocal flaws—the passing notes that weren't quite on pitch, the vocal line that was far from seamless, the inflexibility of the voice when it came to small turns or scale-like passages.

Rachmaninoff's emotion-laden songs worked well in the mezzo-soprano's beautiful in such a song as "Melodie" dynamic approach and the singing was (Op. 21, No. 9), with its extreme range and long pianissimo note at the end. Miss Obratzsova's dark, low voice was effectively used in the Falla works, but the style was too unbridled and rough, without achieving a gutsy Spanish manner. The Dalila arias were a foretaste of a role the artist is to sing at the Met later this season. They mixed some exquisite phrases (the opening of "Amour, viens aider ma bonte") with powerful but roughshod singing. Among the encores were Faure's "Après un reve," which was sung with a nice light charm, and the unsuitable "O mio babbino caro," a lyric soprano aria from Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi."

John Wustman was the singer's superior pianist. In the Rachmaninoff songs, whose piano parts are sometimes as difficult as the composer's piano solos, the playing was especially sensitive even when hard pressed in some of the fast tempos. This was the last recital in Avery Fisher Hall since it was rebuilt. The sound of the solo voice and solo instrument was just as clear and detailed as one could ask.

DON McDONAGH

BIG JOE TURNER'S BACK, WITH THAT 40'S WARMTH

It is more than 30 years since Big Joe Turner was last heard in a New York club shouting the blues in his huge, sonorous voice. That was when he had a five-year run at Cafe Society in the early 40's with Pete Johnson rolling out a thunderous boogie-woogie accompaniment on piano. After this long absence, Barney Josephson, who owned Cafe Society, has finally lured Mr. Turner back to town to sing at his current restaurant, The Cookerie, University Place at Eighth Street.

At 65, Mr. Turner still has a commanding, urgent voice. The warmth, the colors, the adept phrasing that gives every line a lifting momentum, are still present. But instead of gliding around the floor and snapping his fingers as he once did, Mr. Turner, who has put on a great deal of weight and walks with a cane, sits on a cushioned stool when he sings. This has no apparent effect on his easy delivery of blues from those Cafe Society days — "Cherry Red," "Roll 'em, Pete" — or such reminders of his position as a transitional figure between rhythm and blues and rock-and-roll as "Shake, Rattle and Roll" and "Chains of Love."

He is best known for his blithe, buoyant songs. But some of his finest moments are in slow, reflective blues such as "In the Evening When the Sun Goes Down" in which he punches the lines along with a gentle but insistent rhythm. Lloyd Glenn, taking the place of the late Pete Johnson at the piano (with Wayne Wright playing rhythm guitar), is an adept boogie-woogie pianist, both as a soloist and in support of Mr. Turner. But he is less forceful, and sometimes less effective, when Mr. Turner gets away from that basic rhythm.

By ROBIN HERMAN

The New York Rangers allowed an enthusiastic, hard-slating Washington Capitals team to dictate the terms last night and lost, 7-5, before a home crowd that now has seen them defeated in five consecutive games.

The Capitals bombarded New York in the final period with four goals including two by Mike Lappman. Washington's victory was its third straight, a team mark, and cause for rejoicing among these once hapless players.

John Davidson played weakly in the Rangers net and he watched as most of the opposition's goals swept in under his feet. The crowd clapped derisively when the big goalie caught Washington's final shot, waist high, with his glove.

But the fact was Davidson had faced 40 shots. Coach John Ferguson, after watching his team ignore his instructions to check, was infuriated. Calling this the lowest point thus far in the season Ferguson said, "I won't stand idly by. I'm going to make changes. . . if anybody's home tonight." He meant that he would be calling up some of his reserve players from the Rangers' minor league New Haven team. He also mentioned making a trade sometime soon. "We'll see what'll happen in the next few days," he said cryptically.

After jumping to a 2-0 lead in the opening period, the Rangers were over-run by the Capitals in the second period. Washington scored three consecutive goals, including one short-handed goal. Phil Esposito scored on a power play and Don Murdoch got behind the Washington defense to score so the Rangers led, 4-3, after the second period. But Washington was fresh and strong in the middle period. Washington sent 22 shots at John Davidson, in that period, a club record.

Steve Vickers had scored for New York on a tip-in and Wayne Dillon, skating last night on a fourth line, scored from a position to the right of the net almost flush with the posts to put the Rangers ahead early.

But Guy Charron, who for the last two seasons had been the best player on the Capitals' expansion cousins, the Kansas City Scouts, scored for Washington 31 seconds into the middle period after picking up a rebound of a shot by Garnet (Ace) Bailey.

Then Bob Sirois captured another rebound that Davidson had failed to cover up and scored while the big Ranger goalie was on his knees. The third Washington goal was scored by Harland Monahan during a Ranger power play. By now the game had broken open into a fast-skating contest and when Washington found a clear area at its blue line during New York's second period, a club record.

Rutgers, Quietly and Smoothly, Entering Big-Time Sports Era

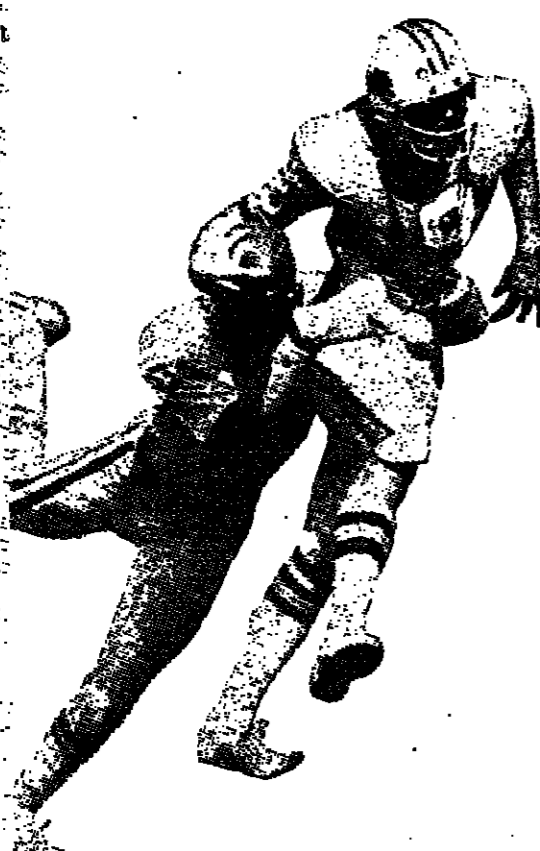

By GORDON S. WHITE JR.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 10—Oklahoma, Indiana, North Carolina State and Rutgers are prestigious state universities that dress their varsity athletes in bright red and white uniforms, receive considerable state funding and are dedicated to similar costly but sometimes profitable big-time intercollegiate athletic programs. The Sooners, Hoosiers and Wolfpack arrived as super powers in college sports many years ago.

In the case of Rutgers, however, not many Jerseyans are aware that the state university has been traveling in the same direction for nearly four years, for the trip to athletic supremacy has been so subtle and controlled that Rutgers has avoided most of the pitfalls. Rutgers wants big-time athletics and all of its spin-off advantages. But Rutgers does not want to be embarrassed by recruiting violations to gain those ends as were Oklahoma, Indiana and North Carolina State in the last 20 years.

Dr. Edward J. Bloustein, president of Rutgers University said: "This move into bigger time intercollegiate athletics is a danger. It's a seductive process."

But the 51-year-old Fulbright Scholar said: "Is it worth it? It is well worth it. Athletics identifies us as a state university in all aspects in everyone's mind. There are many places we can encounter error. The point at which this help to the university and its education becomes a means for its own ends is that danger point. But an athletic program is part of the legitimate cultural outlets of the people of a state and I think this is a cultural as well as educational institution for the state of New Jersey."

Jim Palmer of Orioles with his two previous Cy Young Awards outside Memorial Stadium. Yesterday he won third.

Palmer Is Cy Young Winner 3d Time

By STEVE CADY

Rejected for the All-Star Game last July, Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles had the last laugh yesterday as he became the American League's first three-time winner of the Cy Young Award. He earned the same honor last year, and in 1973.

The only other triple winners of the prize, given annually to the top pitcher in each of baseball's two major leagues, are Tom Seaver and Sandy Koufax. Until 1967, when separate National League and American League voting began, a single Cy Young Award went to the best pitcher in baseball.

Palmer, a right-hander, easily defeated Mark (Birdman) Fidrych of Detroit in this year's balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. The 31-year-old Oriole star received 19 of the 24 first-place votes, compared with five for the Tiger rookie whose zany antics helped increase attendance at ball parks around the league. In points, Palmer outscored Fidrych by 108 to 51, picking up four second-place votes and one third.

Tanana Third in Balloting

Points are awarded on the basis of 5 for first, 3 for second and 1 for third. Fidrych, who made a habit of "talking" to the ball between pitches or congratulating teammates for good fielding plays, gained seven second-place votes and five for third. Fidrych had a won-lost record of 19-9 and led the league with a 2.34 earned-run average.

Frank Tanana of the California Angels finished third with 18 points, and Ed Figueroa of the New York Yankees was fourth with 12.

Palmer, en route to winning 20 games or more for the sixth time in seven seasons, got off to a slow start. At one point, his won-lost record was 6-7. But he wound up with a mark of 22-13. No other American League pitcher won that many games. Palmer also started more games (40) and pitched more innings (315) than anyone else in the league. His six shutouts and 23 complete games ranked second, and his earned-run average of 2.51 was the league's fifth best.

When Manager Darrell Johnson decidid not to select him for the All-Star Game, despite a respectable mark of 10-3 at the time, Palmer caused a stir by criticizing the eventually dismissed Red Sox boss.

"He's an idiot," the Baltimore pitcher said. "The American League never seems to send its best players to the All-Star Game, and maybe this is why they never beat the National League."

Palmer, in the midst of a three-year contract at $175,000 a year, was typically outspoken yesterday at a news conference in Baltimore after the award announcement. Stressing his concern over the possible damage the free-agent negotiations could cause, he suggested that "a few selfish players" could affect the future of baseball.

Palmer Critical of Money War

"This is going to fatten the bank accounts of a few selfish players," he was quoted as having said by The Associated Press, "but it may hurt baseball. What about the balance of the league, and the cities like Baltimore that can't afford it? The Yankees, I think, bought the pennant with a checkbook this year."

Palmer said he didn't want to be thought of as "just another money-hungry player." And he indicated he would remain in Baltimore, unless the Orioles failed to stay competitive. This

Cowens Given 'Leave' From Celtics' Team

By SAM GOLDAPFER

Dave Cowens, the center for the Boston Celtics, was granted "a leave of absence for an indefinite period for personal reasons" before last night's game against the Los Angeles Lakers at the Boston Garden.

Red Auerbach, the president and general manager of the Celtics, said the leave had been granted at the request of the 28-year-old Cowens. Auerbach also said it was the first time in his 30-year association with professional basketball that anything of this nature had occurred.

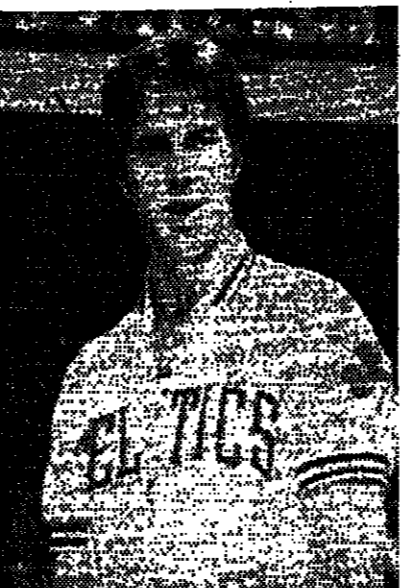

When asked how long Cowens would be out, Auerbach said, "I can't tell. We don't know. The only person who knows that is Dave. It's a personal thing and we're going to have to live with it."

Irv Levin, the owner of the Celtics, said, "Dave told Red he'd like to get away and do some thinking. It has nothing to do with money contracts or anything of that nature. He asked for the leave of absence."

Cowens left no word about where he was going. When Cowens' father Jack was called in Cold Springs, Ky., he said it was the first he had heard of the development.

Despite missing most of the preseason with back spasms, Cowens had

Giants Acquire Shaw, Free Agent, as Backup

MICHAEL KATZ 1 to The New York Times WILLE, N. Y., Nov. 10— who didn't want to play on his own, became a Giant back John McVay immediately. He hoped Shaw didn't play strictly in a reserve capacity said of his new quarterback was signed as a free agent against the Washington Redskins. "I was unable to do more than see on the sidelines today started serious negotiations over the phone but the Yankees haven't made an appointment yet. I've talked to the Mets once. I got a telegram indicating interest in my clients. I called Joe McDonald [the Mets' general manager] and we had a pleasant conversation but we haven't talked since."

The Mets were the only team that formally sent telegrams to Kapstein and the five clients they chose—Rudi, Grich, Baylor, Gullett and Campaneris. The Yankees have negotiation rights to Grich, Baylor, Gullett, Garland, Campaneris and Cash. In all, the 24 teams selected Kapstein's clients a total of 129 times—as many as all 10 by the A's, as few as one (Gullett) by both the Reds and the Braves, one (Tenace) by the Astros. The average is about five per team.

Jerry Kapstein is conducting an auction—but no more than two players to any one team except possibly three to the Angels because the Angels lost three. He knows the club owners can afford the price of liberty. In all their dealings with the Major League Players Association, the club owners wisely never pleaded inability to pay higher salaries. If they had, their books would have been subject to inspection by Federal labor authorities.

The Conflict of Interest "Owners are businessmen," Jerry Kapstein said. "The player gets only what the owner feels will create a return for more than the player gets—in increased attendance, higher TV and radio rights, increased value of the franchise. The most intelligent owners will sign the most quality players because that way they're telling their fans they want all out for a winning team."

"I've tried to create the same family atmosphere among my players," Jerry Kapstein said. "I think I have."

But some baseball people wonder if representing 10 players might create a conflict of interest. The rules regarding free agents stipulate that "teams may not act in concert with each other and players may not act in concert with each other." If three of his players were to prefer to join, say, the Yankees or the Dodgers, which two would he choose?

"But that's just it," he said. "I don't choose, the ball clubs choose. I don't set the priorities, the ball clubs do. Just like in the draft last week, the ball clubs choose the players—the players did not choose the ball clubs. Different ball clubs have different interests. There's been so much interest shown in everybody so far, I can't see that problem coming up. The players understand that the ball clubs are choosing the priorities."

The phone behind him rang and Jerry Kapstein picked it up, listened, then put it down. "Somebody must have this number," Jerry Kapstein snapped. "We'll have to get it changed."

because of a swollen right elbow. Norm Snead was the Giant quarterback in practice.

The swelling on Morton's elbow was down somewhat, but should he not be able to play Sunday, McVay didn't want to go into the game without a reserve for Snead's 37-year-old body.

Enter Shaw, the 1970 American Football Conference rookie of the year with Buffalo and a three-year starter with the Bills. But in 1973, Shaw hurt his right knee and lost his job to Joe Ferguson. A year later his old college coach, Don Coryell, traded Ahmad Rashad to the Bills to get Shaw for the St. Louis Cardinals as a backup to Jim Hart. In

Cherry River, Bought for $600, Top Contender in Aqueduct Dash

By MICHAEL STRAUSS

Some of the older horsemen at Aqueduct did considerable reminiscing yesterday when they learned that Douglas Oliver's Cherry River had arrived from California to take part in this afternoon's $50,000 added Sports Page. Cherry River is the 6-year-old gelding who was purchased by Oliver — he's also the trainer — as a 2-year-old colt at Saratoga for only $600. The youngster was gelded immediately but wasn't much of a racer as a juvenile. Since then he's improved steadily and now has earnings of $245,450.

"The story of Cherry River reminds me of Alsb, the colt that was bought in the early 1940's for only $700 as a yearling," said Sammy Renick, the retired jockey. "He came up with lifetime earnings of about $350,000. I never rode Alsb, but I rode and won many times with his sire, Good Goods, for Brookmeade."

Cherry River's credentials are so formidable that Aqueduct's racing secretary, Tommy Trotter, has him sharing top weight of 118 pounds with Entremont Farm's Cojak in today's six-furlong feature. Twelve sprinters have been named and, if all go, the race will have a value of $55,100.

A Date With My Juliet?

"To be perfectly frank," said Oliver, "we've bought Cherry River East mainly because we feel he has a chance to become the year's champion sprinter. From here, he's to go to Keystone, where we hope he meets My Juliet in what might be considered a showdown for the championship."

Although he has been to the races 59 times—Cherry River continues to display plenty of speed. He has won five of his last seven outings and in his last race—at Santa Anita—he took the Morvich Handicap.

"His career has been featured with speed," said Oliver. "For example, in recent years he's equalled track records at Hollywood Park, Centennial and Santa

The Problem of Enormous Buildup of International Debt

The biggest single worry in financial markets these days is over the enormous buildup of international debt—much of it owed to private commercial banks. There is no way to conceal the danger that some heavy borrowers from abroad may be unable to meet their obligations. Nobody really knows just how large the mountain of international debt is. But what is important is not the aggregate figure, which runs into hundreds of billions of dollars, but the ability of particular nations to meet their payments.

The accompanying chart, based on estimates of the Morgan Guaranty Trust Company and The New York Times, lists some of the nations that Government officials and private bankers in the United States are most concerned about today.

At the head of the list stands Britain, with total borrowings of $45 billion, including both public and private debts. Close behind it come the Comecon countries—the Soviet Union and its satellites in Eastern Europe—with $40 billion in debt outstanding.

Brazil, Mexico and Italy are all in the over-$20-billion class. France, Finland and Indonesia each has outstanding foreign debts of close to $10 billion.

Oil Importers on Worry List

Virtually all the oil-importing developing countries belong on the worry list collectively, their external debts exceed $150 billion.

A vast amount of foreign lending—mostly in dollars—has taken place through the so-called Eurocurrency market, through banks in the major European countries, the Bahamas, Canada, Panama, the Cayman Islands, Japan and Singapore. The net foreign-currency liabilities of Eurocurrency banks in 1970 were $70 billion. By 1973 the figure had reached $160 billion. Today it exceeds $275 billion and is still growing.

The scaremongers of the world, who seem never to be in short supply, are once again writing scenarios about how the entire world monetary system could collapse if one or two countries, even small ones, were to go under.

In part, the motivation for such scaremongering is commercial—whether to sell gold or diamonds or books of fact and fiction.

To be sure, the motivation of those who pooh-pooh the danger of national defaults to private banks and other countries may also be commercial—to protect their own past loans (or follies) and ward off a ruinous blow to public confidence that could itself bring the mountain of debt down with a calamitous crash.

Can Risk Be Evaluated?

In the midst of the Cassandras and the Pollyannas, is there any way to evaluate the risk that the United States and world economy is now facing from the overextension of foreign loans?

The question cannot be answered in the abstract—as though the future somehow already exists. Everything depends on national actions still to be taken.

One critical action will be taken next month when the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries decides whether and by how much to increase the price of oil. If OPEC puts the price up substantially—say by 10 percent or more—this would aggravate the payments problem of all oil-importing countries and push some closer to the brink of default. Can the United States and others dissuade OPEC from a stiff increase?

Some crucial decisions lie in the hands of private bankers, not public officials. Many bankers feel that they have already lent too much to poor credit risks. But if they cut off lending now, they may bring on the defaults—and the crash—they fear. If they go on lending to poor credit risks, however, they will be throwing good money after bad, and only increasing the potential size of the future collapse.

What can government do to resolve this dilemma?

A Crucial Question for Carter

This will be the crucial economic question facing the Carter Administration.

The United States remains the key decision-maker in the world economy both because of its great economic size and also because there is no other nation that can assume the political leadership required for a monetary rescue operation.

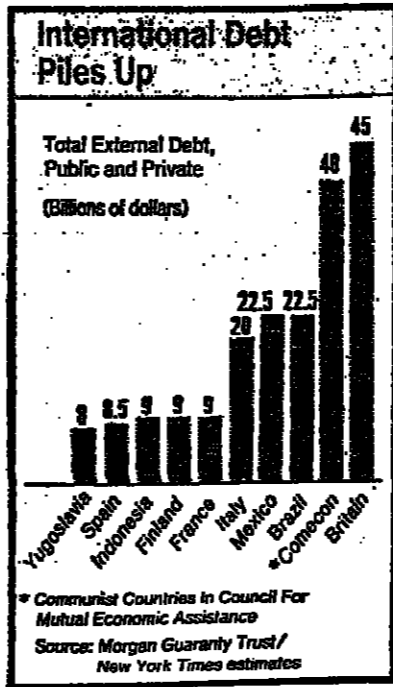

The first requisite for such a rescue is a faster rate of expansion in the three most powerful and stable economies of the industrial world, the United States, West Germany and Japan.

Thanks to the intense persuasiveness of President Ford's economic and financial advisers, especially Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon and the chief economic counselor, Alan Greenspan, the business and financial community has come to regard rapid expansion as the greatest danger facing the United States and world economy.

Worry about a faster rate of economic growth—held to be the likely cause of renewed inflation—has been depressing the stock and bond markets at home and abroad ever since Jimmy Carter's election.

However, the financial markets may be completely wrong. At least some of the most sophisticated members of the financial community think so.

For instance, Rimmer de Vries, the top international economist of Morgan Guaranty, says a stronger fiscal push by the Carter Administration would help restore balance to the world economy in two ways: by strengthening loan demand at home, thereby reducing foreign lending, and by increasing the United States demand for foreign goods, thereby improving world commodity prices and sales, and consequently increasing the foreign earnings of the weaker countries.

Mr. de Vries thinks the United States will now do its part, but he—and many other economists—are more worried about Japan and West Germany, whose conservatism seems unshaken by the persistent world slump.

The International Monetary Fund, Mr. de Vries argues, should raise more money, not just from the better-off industrial countries but particularly from OPEC surplus countries, under the General Agreement to Borrow, and make additional funds available to countries in danger of default. There are other instrumentalities that could be devised to stretch out debt and refinance it.

Treasury Secretary Simon took a hard line at the Manila meetings I.M.F. and World Bank against making a lot more money available to debtors until they had made the necessary adjustments to their own economies to stop domestic inflation and cut their borrowing needs.

There is, always, a tough decision about when and how much to lend a dubious credit risk—lest he prematurely be relieved of the necessity of doing himself what must be done to re-establish his credit. But doing too little and waiting too long can also be a prescription for disaster. The fundamental issue can be oversimplified as Hooverism vs. Rooseveltism.

Left-wing politics is worsening the economic risks abroad today, Richard W. Fisher of Brown Brothers Harriman, sees "an emerging potential for far-reaching and in many cases unpredictable political changes."

He believes the Southern European countries are experiencing substantial left-wing pressures that will be significantly affected by what happens in Yugoslavia after President Tito's death. "The left-wing threat is also a very real force in France and Britain," he adds.

The Western world's disarray has been worsened by economic stagnation and inertia of economic policy leadership by the United States.

But the financial markets have come to fear the cure for stagnation more than the disease itself. It will be no easy task for the coming Carter Administration to gain the confidence of the business and financial community that faster growth and greater official lending are in the mutual interest of this country and others.

Leaders from the financial community itself will be urgently needed to help perform that crucial job of public re-education.

New Powerful Computer Line Added By Sperry Rand's Univac Division

Sperry Univac announced its most powerful computer system to date yesterday as well as new data communication equipment and software. It is the most significant product thrust thus far in the 1970's for the computer division of the Sperry Rand Corporation.

The new products will help shore up two of Univac's chief weaknesses, compatibility among its various computer lines and data communications, according to industry experts.

Sperry Univac's announcement followed by a day the International Business Machines Corporation's introduction of a series of programs designed to link two or more I.B.M. System 370 computers in a data-processing network.

Data communications is one of the fastest-growing and most competitive areas in the $22 billion-a-year data-processing industry.

The new computer, the 1100/80, is the latest and largest addition to the company's 1100 family of computers, which was introduced in 1970. The new computer is compatible with all the other members of the 1100 series as well as with computers in the company's 494 series, which means that present users of these machines can upgrade to the model 1100/80 without having to change software or operating instructions.

By WILLIAM D. SMITH

Sperry Univac has been criticized in the past as having too many incompatible computer lines. The company hopes to silence such criticism, at least among large-scale users, with its new machines.

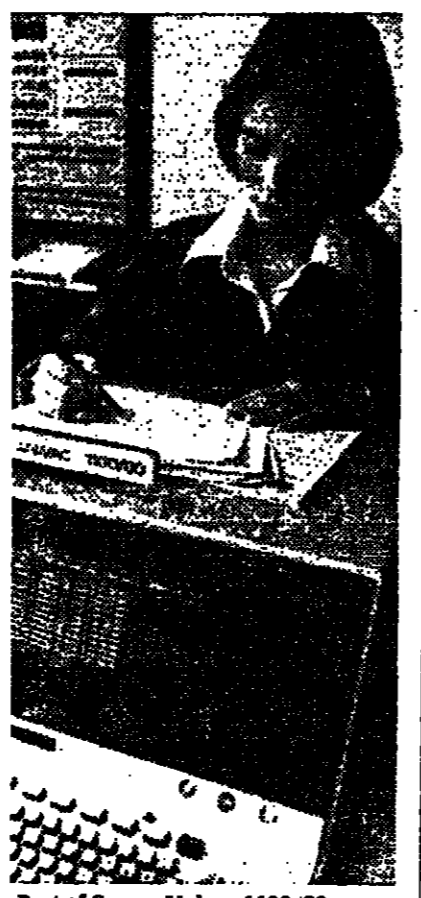

The model 1100/80 has twice the computational power of the 1100/40, until now the largest processor offered by Univac.

Purchase prices for the 1100/80 range from $2 million to $6 million, while rental charges range from $50,000 to $100,000 a month. Main memory sizes range from 2 million characters to 6 million characters.

First customer deliveries are scheduled for the first quarter of next year.

G. G. Probst, president of Sperry Univac, said the company was also "announcing a brand new communication standard, the Sperry Univac Distributed Communications Architecture for planning the architecture of advanced computer and communications networks. DCA is expected to influence the design of communications and networks for the next 10 to 20 years."

Like I.B.M.'s programs announced the day before, the Sperry Univac system permits the connection of multiple computer systems as well as computer terminals to the computing system, considerably increasing the communications capabilities of the system.

Copper: Gloomy Picture for the Industry

By GENE SMITH

Two months ago, market letter writers were forecasting that copper would rise to an average of 80 cents a pound. They saw the price at $1 by the end of 1977.

But instead of rising, copper has been falling since early October. Today it is still around the 70-cent level. And almost no one sees any increase in the months ahead for the industry, which faces the likelihood of a strike in mid-1977 after the expiration of labor contracts.

The domestic producer price for copper wire bars reached the 74-cent level in July and remained there through September. On Oct. 3—almost at the moment that speakers at a forum sponsored by the American Metal Market, a trade paper, in the Pierre Hotel were predicting that prices would hold, with one even forecasting an increase to 77 cents "soon"—the Phelps Dodge Corporation and Asarco Inc. announced unexpectedly that they were cutting prices by 4 cents a pound.

An Oversupply in Warehouses There is no question but that there is an oversupply of copper in warehouses today. At the start of this year stocks of copper in London Metal Exchange warehouses totaled 555,000 metric tons. At the end of last week they reached a high of 581,125 metric tons, according to Dr. Joseph Zimmerman, vice president of the Miles Metal Corporation.

Likewise, Commodity Exchange warehouse stocks that stood at 100,000 tons at the start of 1976 reached a new high of 177,855 tons on Nov. 5, Dr. Zimmerman said. While there have been no major layoffs in the industry, many operations are being maintained on a five-day instead of a seven-day work week. The Kennecott Copper Corporation, the nation's largest domestic producer, noted that in the third quarter its metal mining division had produced a profit against a year-ago loss, largely because of the higher copper prices. But, it warned that improvement in the copper business would depend on the rate of general economic recovery, which it said had slowed in the third quarter.

Since then, prices have been lowered and demand has slackened. In addition, world supplies from foreign producers are running higher than originally expected. For example, Zambian output this year is estimated at 600,000 metric tons, up 20,000 tons over 1975. Zaire's output is forecast at 500,000 tons, also up 20,000 tons and Chilean output, also up 20,000 tons at $20,000 tons, is expected to reach 900,000 tons in 1977.

American Motors Deficit Sets Record as Sales Lag

General Motors Offering a $200 Rebate to Jan. 10 on Subcompact Cars

By WILLIAM K. STEVENS

DETROIT, NOV. 10—The American Motors Corporation, mired in a serious sales slump for nearly a year, reported today a record loss of $51.1 million for the three months ended Sept. 30.

This was the last quarter of A.M.C.'s fiscal year, a year in which the company's net loss totaled $46.3 million. It was the second consecutive 12-month loss for the smallest of the four United States automobile manufacturers. American Motors had a deficit of $27.5 million in fiscal 1975. The 12-month loss reported today was the third largest of the nine fiscal-year losses the company has had in its 22-year history.

Meanwhile, the Chevrolet division of the General Motors Corporation announced a $200 "cash bonus," or rebate, on all sales of its subcompact Chevette and Vega cars purchased between tomorrow and next Jan. 10.

A.M.C.'s deficit for the July-through-September quarter of 1976 was substantially greater than had been expected by some auto-industry analysts, who had estimated it in the vicinity of $30 million. And it exceeded A.M.C.'s previous record loss of $47.8 million in the quarter ended March 31, 1975, which was in the depths of the recession.

The picture is especially grim for American Motors because its competitors, the Big Three auto makers, have been accumulating record profits this year. A.M.C. insists that the source of its troubles is a fall-off in sales of smaller cars, the segment of the domestic market in which it mainly operates and on which it has staked much of its fortunes.

Last week, in an attempt to spur sales, American Motors cut the sticker price of its subcompact Gremlin by $253. A company spokesman said today that dealers were reporting increased "floor traffic" as a result of the price cut. He said that not only Gremlins but also other A.M.C. cars were selling better as a result. Whether the tactic will produce long-term gains remains unknown.

G.M.'s Chevette and Vega and A.M.C.'s Gremlin are all in the subcompact class—the smallest cars made in the United States. Sales in this class for the industry as a whole were off 9 percent during the first 10 months of 1976, compared with the year-earlier pace.

But some industry analysts say that the softness in subcompact sales is not the only reason for A.M.C.'s troubles. While sales of all domestic subcompacts and small foreign cars were off 9 percent, the Gremlin's sales were down 28 percent for the first 10 months.

Likewise, A.M.C.'s subcompact Pacer was off 21 percent. Sales of the American Motors Hornet, a compact car, were down 14 percent although compact-car sales rose, industrywide, by 34 percent. And while intermediate-sized cars were leading the industry as a whole with a rise of 37 percent, A.M.C.'s intermediate, the Matador, was down 41 percent.

So analysts are saying that it is not only softness in the small-car market that is giving A.M.C. difficulty but also intensified competition from the Big Three. The larger companies in recent years have moved strongly into the small-car field that American Motors had once claimed as its own.

Despite the company's difficulties, analysts were refraining from predicting dire

ADVANCE IN RETAIL SALES IN OCTOBER WAS MODEST

Gain Is Only 3/10 of 1% in Fourth Month of Lagging Performance

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP)—Retail sales in October turned in a disappointing performance for the fourth consecutive month, Government figures showed today.

The Commerce Department said sales of the nation's retail outlets advanced three-tenths of one percent in October to $4.06 billion after adjustment for seasonal variation.

At the same time the department revised the September retail sales figures, which had originally been reported as flat, to show a 1.3 percent drop.

The net effect was to leave monthly sales almost precisely where they were in June, when they registered $53.98 billion.

Retail sales remain 8.1 percent ahead of the same month a year ago, and the October report is considered a preliminary estimate subject to substantial later revision.

While the 12-month advance keeps the indicator ahead of the inflation rate of 5.5 percent, the retail sales level still is far behind the annual increase of 10.9 percent registered before a sales stagnation set in last June.

The stall in retail sales has been reflected in several other economic indicators recently, including industrial production and employment. All these suggest

Gold Hits $136.50 An Ounce; Pound Is Up and Dollar Down

LONDON, Nov. 10 (AP)—Gold prices made another substantial advance in London today, reaching their highest level since early January.

Gold closed at $136.50 an ounce, up more than $5.60 from yesterday's late rate and about $18.80 above the international Monetary Fund's Oct. 27 auction price.

The dollar declined, meanwhile, against European currencies, while the pound rose.

Bullion prices are now about $33.45 above the low for the year of $103.05 set at the London fixings Aug. 31. Bullion prices have not reached such a high level since Jan. 12 when gold finished the day at $136.75. In Zurich, gold closed at $137.25, up $6.75 from yesterday's close.

Turnaround in Sentiment

One London gold dealer said there had been an absence of profit taking even though bullion prices have been almost continually rising over the last several weeks.

A turnaround in sentiment about gold has been seen in recent weeks, spurred by a number of factors including fears of new inflation.

A noticeable increase in buying interest from the United States has been apparent in the market, dealers said.

The prospect of a change in the I.M.F. gold auction arrangements has also been a factor behind the upswing in prices, experts said.

Sterling was quoted at $1.6335, up from $1.6287 late yesterday. After trading above 2.42 West German marks, the dollar eased at the end of the day to 2.4145, down from 2.185 late yesterday.

The dollar fell to 4.9613 French francs from 4.9337. However, the dollar moved marginally higher against the lira to 866 from 865.50.

Bay State Is Trying to Revive 'Potentially Rich' Coalfield

By STEVEN RAITNER

MANSFIELD, Mass.—For the last four months, strange machines, looking vaguely like spindly Erector sets, have been traversing the southeast corner of Massachusetts on the backs of pickup trucks in search of coal.

Coal? Coal. In the 19th century, dozens of coal mines flourished in the area, only to be abandoned as oil and Appalachian coal became readily available. And now, in the wake of the energy crisis, serious attempts are under way to redevelop the resources.

Two drilling rigs, at work since late June, have produced 11 test holes that the sponsors of the operation contend indicate potential reserves of 250 million tons. The project is scheduled to last five years and 100 holes, and eventually result in a geological map of the region—known to scientists as the Narragansett Basin—which can be used to induce private companies to begin commercial mining.

Fuel Described as 'Highly Desirable'

"This is a potentially rich source of energy for New England and we're trying to prove it," said the Rev. James Stehan, project head and director of the Western Observatory-Boston College, a geological research institute. "So far, this appears to be highly desirable coal."

To date, the investigation has yielded dozens of wooden crates containing two-inch-thick stratigraphic borings, now being assayed at Weston. Some of the seams appear to be 25 feet thick, according to Joseph Pecoraro, chief of energy resource development for the Federal Energy Administration's Boston office, and the sulfur content is less than three-tenths of 1 percent—easily burnable even in environmentally-conscious New England. However, the enterprise faces a number of hurdles. Most immediately, the money—$225,000 from the National Science Foundation and $133,000 from various local companies and economic development groups—threatens to run out by the end of January. The group is hoping to produce enough scientific evidence by then to draw new money.

Energy Manager Expects Financing

"I think we'll get funds, but I am not prepared to say that we'll get them sufficiently soon," said Irving Sacks, manager of energy programs at Massachusetts Science and Technology Foundation, a quasi-governmental agency that is organizing the fund-raising. "I can't exude great confidence that we won't have a break in the drilling." And even if coal turns out to be in the right place in satisfactory quantity, commercial production is far from assured. Unlike the fields of Pennsylvania, southeastern Massachusetts is densely populated and although the test drilling has yet to engender a popular uprising, no one knows whether the peace will last.

"So far, all I've heard is a sort of constant hum," said Mary McGrail, a housewife who lives across Branch Street from the rig operating on an abandoned railroad line here. "But to

Analysts See Patience Producing Profits

By VARTANIG G. VARTAN
If there is anything a Wall Streeter likes to do, it is listen to what other Wall Street professionals have to say—about the economy, about politics and, most of all, about the stock market. So it came as no surprise that Tuesday's luncheon meeting of the New York Society of Security Analysts drew a packed crowd of analysts, money managers and investment advisers at the Bankers Club downtown to hear a blue-ribbon panel of their peers.

gies," remarked: "We always get a great turnout. We average an attendance of 170 men and women, or double the typical meeting when some corporate executive addresses the group. "I get a tremendous demand from people who want to speak," he added. "I'm booked up through next April for these strategy sessions."

Speakers at the latest meeting comprised a cross-section of Wall Street research-department opinion—a trust company, a nationwide brokerage firm and an investment banking firm. They were Hans G. Jepson, chief investment officer of the United States Trust Company; Manown Kisor Jr., research director for Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis, and Thomas C. Pryor, a director of White, Weld. The ground they covered ranged from Jimmy Carter's election and the current business slowdown to the international scene and the stock market.

Although these men differed slightly on some particulars, what came across generally was a feeling of optimism about the future and the hope that President-elect Carter would prove to be "reasonable" in his policies. Their basic message to the audience—and to investors generally—boiled down to: "Don't panic. Be patient. After selling somewhat lower near term, stock prices should head up to new highs in 1977."

By and large, these research-department officials currently tend to favor consumer-staple stocks, coal-oriented issues, interest-sensitive stocks, fast-food companies, the housing sector and department-store issues. These groups, they said, would stand to benefit from a possible tax cut by the Carter Administration, as well as his policies related to energy.

"One way of playing the housing situation," Mr. Pryor of White, Weld suggested, "is the savings-and-loan group that offers low price-earnings ratios and companies that have become stronger in recent years."

Estimating the future range for the Dow Jones industrial average is a favorite pastime in Wall Street and the analyst luncheon proved no exception. Mr. Jepson said that technical analysts at U.S. Trust estimated that the industrial average might work down as low as "possibly 875 to 880" before recovering, but added that they saw an upside potential of 1,100 within the next year.

Mr. Kisor of Paine, Webber said that "our forecast for the Dow is a high of 1,070 to 1,100 in the coming year. "We view the odds as 7-to-1 against the stock market selling significantly below current levels," he added. "We are urging our clients to get fully invested now."

In general, the panelists said they expected no troubling upsurge in interest rates next year and they agreed that the United States economy, despite its current lull, "is not aborting."

They expressed some caveats to their basically optimistic scenario for the stock market, particularly the precarious economic state of some nations abroad and any excessive—that is, 15 percent or more—increase in the price of oil by the Middle East producing nations.

After the applause died down, one money manager turned to his luncheon companion and said: "I hope they're right, but I must admit this consensus attitude bothers me a bit. You know, Wall Street is a tremendously close-knit community and everybody massages the same numbers."

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 10A Cleveland businessman was indicted by a Federal grand jury here today for allegedly defrauding Japanese and Taiwanese industries of more than $1 million by failing to deliver high-grade plastic resins ordered by the concerns. # Estimate on Corn Is Raised by 3% In a U.S. Survey

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP)—Farmers have almost finished harvesting a record 1976 corn crop of 6.06 billion bushels, the Agriculture Department said today. The department's Crop Reporting Board said corn prospects improved 3 percent since the previous estimate was made a month ago.

Don Paarlberg, the department's director of economics, said the new corn crop estimate was welcome news and that the harvest would do much to slow down retail food price increases that have been through mid-1977. It means that there will be ample supplies of meat."

The soybean crop, which provides valuable protein as a meal supplement in livestock feed as well as vegetable oil, was estimated at 1.25 billion bushels, down 18 percent from last year. The October forecast was about 1.25 billion bushels. Important in Export Trade

As feed for livestock, corn is the main raw material for producing the nation's beef, pork, poultry and milk. It is also important in United States export trade with other countries, including Japan, the Soviet Union and Europe.

Along with a near-record American wheat harvest already completed, 1976 grain production has added significant hope of rebuilding the world's food reserves. Earlier Government figures show that good crops this year in some other major grain-producing countries, including the Soviet Union, has meant an increase of about 6.4 percent in world grain output.

As a result, Agriculture Department experts say that world grain reserves left over when new harvests are ready in 1977 will be substantially larger than they have been in recent years.

For American consumers, successive bumper grain crops in 1975 and 1976 have meant a much slower rise in food prices. This year, according to the department, retail food prices will be up an average of about 3 percent, a pace now expected to continue through mid-1977. The food price jump in 1975 was 8.5 percent, down from a 14.5 percent annual rate in 1973 and 1974.

Drought in some areas, including parts of Iowa, South Dakota and Minnesota, reduced this year's corn yields sharply from early expectations. Nationally, today's report said, corn yields are averaging 85.5 bushels an acre, compared with 86.2 bushels last year.

East Germany Seeks U.S. Grain
WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (Reuters)—East Germany wants to import up to two million metric tons a year of United States grain to keep up its livestock levels and raise meat production, the Agriculture Department said today.

The request follows reports that the Soviet Union—the normal source of food for its East European allies—has told the East Germans to shop elsewhere.

According to the Agriculture Department, the East Germans requested the American grain at a meeting here between a delegation led by the State Secretary of their Foreign Trade Ministry, Gerhard Bell, and a United States team headed by Richard Bell, Assistant Agriculture Secretary for International Affairs.

Big Board Seat Sold at $45,000
The price of a membership declined again yesterday on the New York Stock Exchange. The price fell to $45,000, off $3,000 from the prior sale on Tuesday. Seats are now quoted at $40,000 bid and $50,000 offered.

Rates Advance as a Heavy Volume of Tax-Free Issues Come to Market

By JOHN H. ALLAN

Interest rates on state and city bonds rose yesterday as the tax-exempt securities market shouldered a heavy volume of new issues, with Pennsylvania selling $147 million and Washington $84 million. Elsewhere in the credit markets, however, prices rose slightly and interest rates were moved downward as traders prepared for today's slowdown resulting from the Veterans Day partial holiday.

Credit Markets
Bond dealers active in underwriting tax-exempt issues estimated yesterday that yields were 10 basis points, hundredths of a percentage point, or more, higher than they were last week as bond prices were reduced to entice investors into purchasing the heavy volume of $1 billion of new issues for sale this week.

In preparing to bid today, investment bankers singled out Washington's $84 million sale of high-grade bonds as perhaps the best indication of the tax-exempt bond market's current state, but late yesterday the offering seemed atypical.

Bankers Trust Heads Syndicate
An underwriting network headed by the Bankers Trust Company won the bonds, and it then offered them to investors at yields ranging from 2.95 percent on those maturing in 2000 and 2001. These yields were 5 or 10 basis points lower than the yields on $50 million of West Virginia bonds marketed last Thursday in the preceding sale of high-grade state bonds. Washington is rated AA by Moody's and AA+ by Standard & Poor's, while West Virginia is graded A-1 slightly lower than AA and AA+.

Even with these slight declines in yield, the Washington bonds sold relatively rapidly, and all but $22 million was reported sold last night when orders were tabulated.

Pennsylvania, which sells bonds more frequently than Washington and is rated A-1 by Moody's and AA by Standard & Poor's, awarded $147 million of bonds to a Salomon Brothers syndicate that priced them to yield from 2.80 percent in 1977 to 6.80 percent in 1986.

$61 Million Balance
At the end of the afternoon, the unsold balance was $61 million. Half of the sales were to a $43 million secondary account of Wall Street dealers and sales from that public were not disclosed.

fell 1 1/2 points to 69 as the most actively traded issue. Recently, it sold above 75, following the declaration of a $3-a-share year-end dividend—the fattest payout of its kind ever made by the giant automotive producer.

Precious-metal stocks, meanwhile, continued to move counter to the general market decline. The price of gold advanced sharply in European bullion markets, partly reflecting fears that the spending policies of President-elect Jimmy Carter could touch off a renewed round of inflation.

But on Wall Street yesterday, there was less concern with what a new President might do than with what already was happening to the United States, where a vigorous economic recovery appears to have turned into a lull—and possibly worse with bewildering speed.

The Chevrolet division of General Motors said it would give a $300 rebate to all buyers of its new Chevette and Vega small passenger cars between Nov. 11 and next Jan. 10. Later, the company's Pontiac division offered a similar plan for buyers of its subcompact Astra, which is comparable to the Vega.

Chrysler Third on Active List
Prior to the G.M. announcement, Wall Street already showed concern over plans of Chrysler to shut down two assembly plants for one-week periods later this month. Yesterday, Chrysler's stock dropped 1 1/2 points to 17 1/2 as the third most active issue.

Along with indications of a disappointing rate in new-car sales, investors had to contend with a report from the American Motors Corporation that it lost $51.1 million—a record—in the third quarter. The stock of A.M.C., which has cut the price of its Gremlins, was unchanged at 4 yesterday, after selling earlier this year as high as 7 1/2.

In the precious-metal sector, gains of a point or more appeared in Hecla Mining, Sunshine Mining, ASA, Calahan Mining and Campbell Red Lake Mines.

Among prominent growth stocks, weakness was especially apparent in semiconductor issues. National Semiconductor, reaching a yearly low, fell 2 1/2 to 25 1/2; Texas Instruments, 4 1/2 points to 98 1/2; and Fairchild Camera, 2 1/2 to 38 1/2.

White declines outnumbered advances by more than an 8-to-5 ratio, there were some bright spots. CBS, for example, rose 5 1/2 to 52 1/2 after directors raised the dividend and also authorized the purchase of $15 million of new common stock.

Soybeans Lead

GO. Nov. 10 (AP)—Farm commodities moved firmly ahead on the Board of Trade today, led by soybeans on a gain of more than a bushel.
Prices were mixed, but new-crop prices were up 3 cents. Corn rose while oats were up nearly 3 cents. Soybean meal prices were mixed nearly options advanced up to $30. Soybean oil advanced nearly a pound and iceed broilers nearly a cent higher.
The commercial selling on the board shortly afterward set a lower price but after the offerings absorbed a rally lifted soybeans
1 1/2 cents. Smaller gains were posted on corn and oats. Thereafter, soybeans ruled the floor and prices in other markets generally moved in the direction of the beans.

that the economic recovery has lost steam, at least temporarily.
The tapering off in retail sales growth was expected at this point in the recovery. But the problem in the economy generally has been that the pickup in business spending, which was to have taken up any slack, has yet to materialize.
The retail sales figures from the Commerce Department showed that sales of department stores and clothing stores were up by 1.8 percent, more than counterbalancing a nine-tenths of one percent drop in sales of building materials, hardware and farm equipment outlets.

Copper: Prices Down, Supply Up, Strike Looms

any price changes for the balance of this year. He pointed out that there is roughly a 15-cent price differential between the domestic producers' price and those on the London Metal Exchange.
"Frankly," he said in a telephone interview, "the domestic producers had no business raising their prices to 74 cents. That was purely a speculative move. When they went back to 70 cents they were being more realistic. There's just no reason to lower prices now."
Dr. Zimmerman said there is also the question of what the Carter Administration will do with regard to wage and price controls.
"That's why I think prices will stay where they are for awhile," he said.
There's no reason to cut price further.
Who would want prices frozen at the low-end?"
H. Myles Jacob, chairman of the Inspiration Consolidated Copper Company, said yesterday that the "fourth quarter will not be nearly as good as the third because prices have dropped and there has been a major decrease in demand for copper."
However, he was somewhat sanguine on the subject of copper prices.
"Who's to say how long a strike will last?" he asked. "One week? Eight weeks? Eighteen months? It's an imponderable situation."

The most recent issue of Metals Week, a McGraw-Hill publication, is somewhat more bullish. Citing estimates of Chase Econometrics Associates, the trade publication forecast copper prices "should reach 90 cents per pound by the end of next year."
It said the forecast took into consideration a "long" domestic copper strike at midyear—"one that will allow producers to reinstate the historical supply-demand balance and push prices up if for no other reason than to cover the costs of new labor contracts."
"Everybody Living Off Inventories" Herbert Barchoff, president of Eastern Rolling Mills Inc., in the Bronx, said there are "two possible conflicting forces overhanging the market—the possibility of a General Motors strike and a boom market that could result from the possible outbreak of hostilities in Africa." He continued:
"Barring either eventuality, I can see nothing on the upside until the end of January. We're going through a period where everybody is living off inventories with consumption up 15 to 20 percent over last year. The only plus factor would be a continuation of the pickup in housing starts that would be felt in this industry a month or so later."
"The season to be jolly is anything but that for the copper industry, I see nothing really on the bullish side, what with roughly 60 percent of the free world's copper production being sold below cost."

Dr. Zimmerman generally agreed with Mr. Barchoff's outlook and said the question now is how to lose less money—maintain production at the present level or pure production. He said he believed the industry could stand a three-month strike in 1977 but that it was a foregone conclusion that the workers would get higher wages or fringe benefits.
"The costs will obviously go up and the producers can't make them up immediately and the consumers are not really concerned because they have ample supplies on hand," he said.
Third-quarter earnings of the major copper companies do not give a true picture because of their diversified operations. The Kennecott Copper Corporation, for example, showed third-quarter net income of $4.8 million against a loss of $20.5 million a year ago. However, the 1975 figure included a loss of $1.5 million from the closing of a plant and an adverse tax adjustment of $3.5 million.
The Anaconda Company also had a turnaround, posting a $6.7-million net income against a loss of $6.6 million the 1975 third quarter. The 1976 net was after a tax loss carryforward credit.

lief was translated into the demand that generated higher prices in all the pits.
However, the department reported later that corn prospects improved by 3 percent since the previous estimate a month ago and that farmers had almost finished harvesting a record 1976 corn crop of 6.06 billion bushels.
The soybean estimate remained at 1.25 billion bushels.
At the close, soybeans were 2 to 10 1/2 cents a bushel higher, with November at $6.70; corn was 1/2 to 2 1/2 cents higher, with December at $2.46; oats were 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 cents higher, with December at

Bethlehem Steel Cuts Operations Because of Slackening Demand

The Bethlehem Steel Corporation, second to the United States Steel Corporation in production, announced yesterday that it had closed certain operations "due to a slackening in demand for steel."

A spokesman for Bethlehem said that at the company's Sparrows Point, Md., steel operations it had closed two coke-oven batteries, an open-hearth shop and a blast furnace "until there is an upturn in steel demand." He said about 850 of the plant's 17,850 workers there would be laid off indefinitely.

He also noted that Bethlehem had closed one of its five blast furnaces at Lackawanna, N. Y., and had adjusted certain other operations because of a reduction in orders for steel products.

The spokesman said about 300 of the 12,000 employees there would be laid off.

I.B.M. Consents To Director Curb

The Federal Trade Commission disclosed that the International Business Machines Corporation had consented to a commission order barring I.B.M. from interlocking directorates with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company or any A. T. & T. subsidiaries when they compete with I.B.M.

The commission order also requires I.B.M. to adopt procedures designed to prevent it from having director interlocks that violate Federal antitrust law with other competing companies.

The government agency based its action on staff allegations that I.B.M. and the New York Telephone Company, a unit of A. T. & T., compete in marketing data communication terminals and also formerly shared two directors in common.

The individuals named by the F.T.C. are Amory Houghton Jr. and George L. Hinman. The F.T.C. said that Mr. Houghton resigned from the New York Telephone board after learning of the commission investigation earlier this year. Mr. Hinman retired from both boards also after the start of the investigation, the F.T.C. said. However, Mr. Hinman had reached the age of 70 at the time.

Cabot & Forbes Sets Deal

Cabot & Forbes, a national real-estate development company, said it had successfully negotiated a refinancing to provide $9.8 million in new money and push back the due date on nearly $500 million in loans. Gerald W. Blakely, chairman, commented that "we never dreamed the recession in the real-estate department would become a depression."

Kodak Camera Ban In Britain Rejected

A British appeals court overturned a court order banning the Eastman Kodak Company from introducing its new instant cameras and film in Britain. The ban had been sought by the Polaroid Corporation, which makes a rival instant-photo system.

Polaroid announced at its headquarters in Cambridge, Mass., that it would ask the House of Lords for permission to appeal to the House of Commons for reinstatement of the temporary injunction.

In overruling the ban, the court said there was no danger of Kodak's driving Polaroid out of the British market or of causing irreparable damage to Polaroid's business there.

Polaroid had sought the sales ban in a suit against Kodak that charged infringement of 10 patents. The two companies have also been battling over patents in Federal Court in Boston and in Canada.

A. & P. Forms New Store Unit

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company Inc. has announced the formation of a wholly owned subsidiary, Family Center Inc., to operate a chain of combination food and drug stores the company plans to build.

H. Prentice Merritt, formerly vice president-special projects of A. & P., was named president of the new unit. He joined the company in 1975 to direct property development.

The new subsidiary, with headquarters in Atlanta, will be responsible for the operation of combination stores averaging more than 50,000 square feet in size. The company's conventional new supermarkets average 30,000 square feet.

Merrill Lynch Plans To Offer Gold Coins

Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. announced an expansion of its bullion program to enable individuals to buy gold coins.

Under the expanded program, the coins may be purchased and sold through all of the brokerage firm's domestic offices beginning Friday. Merrill Lynch said the program would include orders for either round lots or odd lots and that commissions would be determined on the quantity and price of coins sold or purchased similar to the commissions charged by Merrill Lynch on a security transaction of the same principal amount.

The company began its gold program in December 1974 when Americans were again permitted to hold gold.

Fairchild Gets Order

Fairchild Industries Inc. has been awarded a $280.9 million Air Force contract for production of 100 A-10 close-support aircraft.

Empress Travel

“Over 20 years we’ve spent 90 percent of our advertising budget in The Times. For the past 17, we’ve run every week in the Sunday Times Travel section. It’s paid off.”

Empress Travel's agency: Alden Advertising Agency, Inc.

“In 1957, Empress Travel was a one-man, one-location business. Today we have over 30 retail operations—one of the largest retail travel chains in the country. Obviously, we wouldn't have grown if we didn't offer a desirable product. But where we do the offering is just as important.

“The Times Travel section is like a department store. Every segment of the total travel market shops it. We reach ethnic markets, young marrieds, families, singles, groups, you name it. In fact, if you consider anyone over a certain income as a potential vacation traveler, then The Times gives us access to a mass market.

“And the response is immediate. We're open on Sunday and great numbers of phone calls and walk-ins come in on the day our ad appears. We also get good response from outside the New York area—calls from all over the country, including the West Coast.

“The Times has terrific trade impact as well. Every important hotel and airline executive reads the Travel section and sees our Sunday ads before the trade publications come out that week.

Mego Chooses Bates—a la Carte

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY

International, the toy company that is expected to spend $15 million for advertising next year, has chosen Bates & Company to begin Jan. 1. The company, which will be compensated on a flat fee basis, has taken the business to a new level. It will write and buy the time for its TV assignments while the rest of the advertising is placed in the last three years and placed in a buying service, continues and distribute its own commercial that Mego sought an out, according to Frederick C. senior vice president for and operations. It is the de- upon the company by its th. It produced 26 commercials and is spending just over for advertising. Next year to produce 50 commercials $15 million.

prove to be helpful here. Currently Mego uses spot TV in its own best 47 markets, reaches 114 markets through syndicated shows, and runs spots during children's programming on the ABC and CBS Networks. Mego, which had $56 million in sales during its last fiscal year, manufactures "articulated character figures" and "wardrobes for them; games and toys most of them tied in with popular personalities or TV programs. Cher is its best seller, but it also has Muhammad Ali, Starsky and Hutch, the Fonz and some Star Trek items. About a quarter are made in the United States and the rest in the Orient.

When the company decided to shop around for an agency it leaked that it was looking to the press and the resulting stories elicited calls from about 40 eager agencies.

Mr. Pierce trimmed the list to 26, each of which was invited down to the Mego offices for individual briefings. He said yesterday that "the level and caliber" of the agency representatives was one of the determining factors.

"Some, he said, sent 'low-ranking new business people' while the top people came from others. The Bates representative was Donald M. Zuckert, an executive vice president, who had run the Marx toy account at Bates for many years.

The list of 26 was cut to six to three. The three each gave presentations on their media and creative departments and their strengths.

Of the three, only Bates had had previous toy advertising experience and this was a deciding factor, Mr. Pierce said. He didn't mention Mr. Zuckert's personality.

Stockbrokers' Magazine

Tolman Geffs of Newport Beach, Calif., is a two-business-card man. One identifies him as president of an advertising agency. The other as president of the Plaza Publishing Company. The two-year-old agency specializes in investor relations and running it. Mr. Geffs discovered what he calls "a hole in the media." No publication directed specifically at stockbrokers.

So he started one called The Registered Representative, now a bimonthly that doubles its frequency in February. Almost 35,000 copies are being mailed free (controlled circulation) to individual brokers or brokerage offices.

A black and white full-page ad goes for $2,400 and there is a $1,000 premium for four-color. Mr. Geffs, wearing his publisher's hat, reports that he went into the black with the second issue now going into the mails.

Focus on Consumers

Always-topical, Stanley I. Tannenbaum, chairman of Keayon & Eckhardt, focused yesterday on the marketplace ramifications of the Presidential election in a speech to the American Marketing Association in Chicago.

"Consumerism," he said, "has been given fresh impetus by the Democratic Party's platform pledge to create an office of Citizen Advocacy with the power to intervene in the regulatory matters on behalf of the consuming public."

Mr. Tannenbaum said he didn't believe that this was something the consumer really wanted and cited his agency's research to back up the opinion.

What consumers want, he said, is "more informative product information in advertising on which they can base their buying decisions." That, of course, led to comparative advertising, of which he is an advocate.

How Carriers Spent It

The advertising spending for all public carriers—airlines, trains, steamship lines and buses—increased 5 percent in measured media last year compared with 1974, according to a study by Harris, Kerr, Forster & Company. Newspaper advertising was up 9 percent. TV was the only medium showing a decrease.

The total spending was $218.6 million, of which $137 million was contributed by domestic airlines. That was an increase of only 1 percent.

Car-renting companies were also included in the study and they showed the biggest advance in spending—54 percent to $21.1 million. Bus lines spending also soared 41 percent to $10.5 million.

Family Circle Adds Travel

Family Circle in its March issue for the first time will include a "Family Travel" section aimed at attracting domestic and international advertisers who are looking for that kind of editorial environment. Advertisers can buy any or all of three regional editions.

DEMOCRATS DEBATE END TO RECESSION

reduction, although he has not clearly stated a preference for a rebate as opposed to a permanent tax cut.

Similar considerations that are both economic and political enter into the argument over whether any tax reduction should be in the form of an income tax cut or should focus on low-income individuals by doing something about Social Security taxes.

Those who want to cut Social Security taxes note that that is the only way to use the tax system to help millions of families and individuals who pay no Federal income tax. Recent changes in the tax laws have exempted from income tax any single person who does not make more than $2,700; any husband and wife who do not make more than $4,100 and any family of four that does not make more than $6,100. A simple income tax rebate would be of no help to them.

Mr. Carter himself, in his news conference last Thursday, said that the objective of any tax cut would be "to stimulate purchasing power among the average American family and would be heavily oriented toward the lower payroll level." That sounded, to many, like forgiveness of Social Security taxes, although Mr. Carter refused to specify that this was what he meant.

The problem with proposing some sort of temporary exemption from Social Security taxes is that many people, in and out of Congress, object on philosophical grounds to tampering with the tax base of the Social Security system. The notion of trying to help the lower-income group in this fashion is seen as simply too radical to get through Congress quickly, and quick action may be what is needed in January, in the view of the establishment liberals.

prospects for its long-term survival. They point out that other A.M.C. divisions aside from its American passenger-car division are doing well—including Jeep trucks, A.M. General buses, and Canadian automobiles.

In addition, they note that the company has not yet had to go into the money market, that it has been trimming its work force, that it can cut back somewhat on its capital expenditures and that the small-car segment of the market can be expected, almost inevitably, to rebound again to where A.M.C. will be squeezed less by its competitors than is now the case.

"It's going to change," an A.M.C. spokesman said today. In the meantime, he acknowledged, the company is doing the best it can and waiting for sales cycles to shift.

Chevrolet Joins Revival
DETROIT, Nov. 10 (AP) — General Motors' Chevrolet division joined the auto rebate revival today, saying it will pay $200 cash to anyone who buys a new Chevette or Vega before Jan. 10.

The announcement by Chevrolet—saddled with huge stocks of unsold Chevies and Vegas—comes a day after American Motors began offering rebates of between $25 and $225 on 1977 cars and Jeeps to retired persons in two organizations.

The rebates are the first since early 1975, when all four automakers offered cash bonuses of up to $800—mostly for small cars—in a move to pull the market out of a steep depression.

The industry has since rebounded and sales of most models are robust, but demand for small cars remains low. General Motors, which shut its Vega assembly line for this week, has a more than 140-day supply of unsold Vegas and 100-day supply of Chevettes in dealer hands. A 60-day supply is considered optimal.

Chevy said that, under the program, customers may choose either a direct factory rebate or use the $200 as part of a down payment on any 1976 or 1977 model purchased from an authorized Chevy dealer.

To accommodate those wanting a specific model not in dealer inventory, Chevrolet said it also would provide the $200 rebate to customers who order a Chevette or Vega before Dec. 10 but take delivery after Jan. 10.

Nissan Raises Prices
The Nissan Motor Corporation, U.S.A., announced yesterday that it had raised its American prices of its 1977 Datsun cars and trucks by an average of 3.8 percent, or about $125 a vehicle.

RAILROADS ASKING I.C.C. FOR 4% FREIGHT RATE RISE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (Reuters)—The nation's railroads formally asked the Interstate Commerce Commission today to approve a 4 percent across-the-board increase in freight rates effective Jan. 1.

Approval will mean higher transportation costs for almost all products and commodities; and these in turn will be passed on to consumers in higher retail prices.

The railroads, which has announced plans to file for the higher rates, said the increase would produce $694 million in additional annual revenues and was needed to help offset nearly a billion dollars of higher costs for labor, materials and other expenses.

The I.C.C. has approved a two percent rate increase this year—4.7 percent in March and 5 percent in October.

It could approve the latest proposed increase without any proceedings or could order an investigation to determine whether the increase is justified. A decision is not expected for several weeks.

Perils of a Chemical War

PBB Incident in Michigan Is Viewed as Evidence of Need for New Investigation

By JANE E. BRODY

In 1973 a fire retardant containing a toxic industrial chemical called PBB was accidentally mixed into annual feeds in Michigan, poisoning hundreds of thousands of farm animals and producing wide-ranging complaints of illness among people who ate PBB-contaminated animal products.

The incident is but one in a number of recent environmental catastrophes that have beset an increasingly chemical world. Yet few mechanisms exist for investigating the consequences of such mishaps, stemming from their preventing them from occurring. And an exploration in detail of the health effects of the Michigan accident was begun only last week by a federally financed medical team.

With the rise of such incidents, experts say that it is becoming clear that epidemics can be caused not only by infectious organisms but also by synthetic chemicals that spread, sometimes insidiously, through the environment.

To handle these chemical epidemics, a new breed of specialist is needed—an environmental epidemiologist, an expert with traditional epidemiologists and analytical chemists who understands such things as food chains, soil chemistry, meteorology, chemical manufacturing and distribution methods.

Mercury Deaths in Japan

In the 1950's, 46 people died and 75 others were poisoned by eating fish from Japan's Minamata Bay that had been contaminated with mercury from the discharge from a plastics plant. In the late 1960's, more than 1,000 Japanese were poisoned by eating foods tainted with PCB—a chemical relative of PBB—that had leaked into cooking oil.

Last July, an explosion spewed dioxin—one of the deadliest chemicals known to man over a 494-acre region of northern Italy, killing hundreds of animals and making more than 500 people sick.

Besides these specific incidents, there is a low-level, almost universal contamination of the environment and of people with PCB's and DDT and other chemicals foreign to the human body, some of which seem to persist indefinitely. The long-term effects of these contaminants are not known, but there is a real possibility that they may cause birth defects or cancer or both.

Yesterday in Grand Rapids, Mich., a 35-member team from Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York completed examining 1,040 men, women and children who are known or thought to have consumed meat, milk or eggs containing PBB.

Questions on Seriousness

Although the first findings will not be available for about four weeks, team doctors say they found a preponderance of joint problems, memory disturbances, skin abnormalities and excessive fatigue among survey participants that may or may not be caused by PBB.

The comprehensive examinations, supported by the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, were begun three and a half years after the contamination occurred and two and a half years after this agricultural disaster was identified.

State officials spent years haggling with the extent and seriousness of the Michigan Dept. Health conducted a study among farm families, comparing them to those in the comparison group to also have PBB contamination. The state's finding of no ill effects in the comparison group is thrown into question.

An expert scientist, the Governor advised a problem all animals amounts of PBB should be in the absence of precisely rejected the idea. Farmers charged with responding to agricultural surveys and trying to instead of openly admit of the problem and mess. The state county were exaggerating, lems and mismanaging.

TV: 'Gibbsville' on NBC Tonight

A Fine Cast in Stories Based Loosely on O'Hara's— On Public TV, a Moving Drama About Nisei

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR

NBC has mercifully laid to rest "Gemini Man" in the big electronic graveyard for failed series. With some jiggling of the schedule, it is being replaced tonight at 10 with "Gibbsville," which is based loosely, very loosely, on stories of John O'Hara.

As a pilot a couple of seasons ago, "Gibbsville" had Frank Gilroy, the playwright ("The Subject Was Roses"), performing the duties of writer and director. Mr. Gilroy barely survived the bureaucratic mills of television and studio executives. In fact, he openly declared that he was not eager to work in a television factory again—and his connection with this series appears to be in name only. But Mr. Gilroy did manage to retain at least a modicum of O'Hara in the pilot, a tone and atmosphere that didn't totally violate the intentions of the semi-autobiographical "Gibbsville" stories.

Even that much is gone now as television's "Gibbsville" emerged in a formula closer to radio's old serial "Our Gal Sunday." The time is the 1940's in the small New England town, but it could be any time in the world of soap opera as an offscreen narrator speaks of "a small but growing town" with its roots in mining, of the "true stories" to be found behind the doors, of secret lives and dreams.

John Savage returns to play Jim Malloy, a newspaper reporter in his 20's who is "discovering life and himself." Gig Young is back as the veteran reporter, Ray Whitehead, once internationally renowned and now reduced to small-town dimensions by alcohol. Biff McGuire is better than anyone has a right to expect as Jim's father, a doctor. And tonight's "guest stars" are Walter Pidgeon and Jane Wyatt, portraying an elderly playwright and his wife. There is, obviously, no shortage of acting talent.

But there is also no shortage of television's curious compulsion to overload an already wobbly vehicle, to touch as many demographic bases as possible. This evening's episode features not one but two key study lines: Jim and Ray investigating an explosion at the local coal and iron company, much to the displeasure of the town's establishment, and the elderly playwright taking to his death bed with style and propriety. In between, Ray drinks in the local saloon, Jim is seduced by the immigrant lass in the pool at the country club, the elderly playwright's wife can't get a doctor for a house call, and so on—all stuffed into about 50 minutes. Everything is used; nothing is seriously explored. "Gibbsville" flickers briefly before our eyes and disappears.

For immediate comparison, there is this evening's presentation at 9 on "Visions," a public television series designed to bring original dramas to television. "The Gold Watch," written by Momoko Iko, is about a Japanese-American family living on the West Coast in the months before and after Japan's 1941 attack on Pearl Harbor. It is a flawed play. The structure is annoyingly contrived. Key incidents too frequently take place off stage. What is supposed to be dramatic is reduced through clumsiness, into melodrama.

But, for all of its deficiencies, "The Gold Watch" is both moving and powerful. The play has the passionate urgency of revelation. It is not using its material; it is painfully searching for truths. This is poor family, exploited by nature and the local bank ("We can always count on our Japanese folk to pay us back") and envied for their industry by their white and bigoted neighbors. The father is too proud to accept charity. The mother desperately seeks out tokens of kindness for her children. Poverty is breeding shame and hate among them.

After Pearl Harbor, the family and their Japanese neighbors debate the future. The tensions within the community are brought to the surface. The assimilated are confronted with the traditionalists, the Catholics with the Buddhists, the militants with the compromisers—all of them facing the humiliation of internment in United States camps. "Our Japanese folk" it seems, are as complicated, or human, as any other folk.

"The Gold Watch" cannot be forgotten easily. Lloyd Richards has directed with telling sensitivity. And the acting is generally superb, especially from a performer named Mako in the role of the father. The credits offer "special thanks to the East West Players for assistance."

They called it first. You watched them most.

It was a great night for the winning candidates. And NBC News had a pretty fair night itself.

For it was NBC News that attracted the largest audience on Election Night—seven per cent more than the second network and 65 per cent more than the third.*

What's more, NBC News was the first to signal victory for Jimmy Carter. Its projection—at 3:30 a.m. EST—of his win in Mississippi gave Carter the clincher. Attracting the largest audience and serving that audience with fast, accurate projections was a demonstration of a news organization functioning at its very best. That's the way the press saw it, too:

"NBC had the best national coverage of the election...Chancellor and Brinkley managed a cohesive style of reportage that was television at its best."

Bill Granger, Chicago Sun-Times.

"NBC... seemed to best achieve the often elusive marriage of the verbal and the visual that was needed Tuesday night."

Sander Vanocur, Washington Post.

"The team of John Chancellor and David Brinkley easily outshone their counterparts at the other two networks...the NBC News physical setup was also far superior to that of the competition."

Bill Hickey, Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"...some of my best friends are involved in crime."

"Muggings. Petty theft. Drugs. They're helping to stop them, not cause them.

Right now, we're working to get more lights on our streets. And we're organizing a project to get people in the community to properly lock their doors and windows.

We're also involved in a clean-up campaign for our parks. And a letter writing campaign for a new library.

You see we feel it's up to us to try to make the world around us a better place to live.

For us. Our families. Our community.

So we support the things we believe in.

And work to change the things we don't.

I guess that's part of knowing what you want from life. And recognizing you should do something about it today, because there'll be something else to do tomorrow."

The way Michael and his friends feel about social responsibility is an example of the new values many young adults share today.

And because Psychology Today responds to those values, it attracts over four and a half million people every month.

People who believe in living their dreams today, not tomorrow.

For example, according to Simmons, more of PT's readers write their congressman, attend public meetings and get involved in community affairs, than the readers of just about every other major magazine.

Our readers are young, educated and always ready to fight for what they believe.

And PT readers set the trends others follow.
